The President's Address.
The 100 Days.
Short History of Flying.
Strikes May Be Expensive.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE POPULATION of the United States, and a great part of the civilized world outside, discusses President Roosevelt's admirable radio address, its deep sincerity and lofty purpose.

"Omens" do not bother the President, who speaks with pride of the crowded events of "the hundred days" since his inauguration that have been devoted to "starting the wheels of the New Deal."

THE EXPRESSION, the "hundred days," was first used to describe the period between Napoleon's return from Elba, March 15, 1815, and June 28, 1815, when Louis XVIII became king and the prefect of Paris, welcoming him, spoke of the cent jours, "100 days."

These "hundred days" to President Roosevelt mean days that "will start the wheels turning NOW and not six months from now."

President Roosevelt is not interested in anything around the corner.

HIS ANECDOTE about Andrew Jackson, of whom it was said, when someone asked "Will he go to heaven?" "He will if he wants to," was well applied by the President to the American people's ability to pull themselves out of this depression.

"They will, if they want to."

Andrew Jackson, who doubtless did want to go to heaven, and is there, would be interested in his present successor in the White House, who closed every bank in the country in one day, and did it gently, without any invocation of "the eternal."

THOSE WHO have mistakingly believed that President Roosevelt is in the hands of a "brain trust," convinced that earth's problems can be solved out of a book, are set right by the President's reminder:

"I happen to know that professional economists have changed their definition of economic laws every five or ten years for a very long time."

For him, Adam Smith is as old as Hammurabi and Ruskin is a fairy story.

The President's hopes were admirably expressed in these few words:

"But I do have faith and retain faith in the strength of common purpose, and in the strength of unified action taken by the American people."

SINCE President Roosevelt's broadcast, Washington reports that messages from business men and others, promising cooperation with the President, are severely taxing the facilities of both telegraph companies and "completely swamping the clerical staff at the White House."

Emerson says:

"Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm."

President Roosevelt has succeeded in arousing among successful men in this country such professions of enthusiasm as have not been seen since the enthusiasm of the French revolution, when French nobles, one after the other, publicly abandoned their titles and insisted on being called plain "monsieur."

TWENTY-FOUR years ago yesterday, the Frenchman Louis Bleriot flew across the English Channel, startling the world and the British especially.

When that happened, after Lord Northcliffe, owner of the London Daily Mail, had offered ten thousand pounds reward for such a flight, England's greatest defense became meaningless.

Napoleon sat on the edge of the channel waiting for the wind to change, but never crossed. Now any boy can fly from the continent, land in England, and, if undeterred, drop what he pleases on any city.

Northcliffe, by the way, told the writer that, having offered the ten thousand pounds reward, he got Lloyd's to insure him for a trifle against paying, and Lloyds paid the 10,000 pounds to Bleriot.

REAL FLYING began when Orville Wright flew, with a heavier-than-air plane, one hundred and twenty feet. Then Bleriot flew across the channel, then Lindbergh flew the Atlantic to Paris.

Now Wiley Post, in a little more than seven days, flies around the world, and the Italian air admiral Balbo is flying home on the return trip to Italy.

When progress starts it moves rapidly.

SIX THOUSAND employes of the moving picture industry have gone out on strike in Hollywood, and seek to tie up the entire industry. The strike has an unpleasant effect on the efforts to improve conditions.

The moving picture industry, as it happens, pays the highest wages of any industry on the Pacific Coast.

If strikers and "sympathetic strikers" succeed in tying up the moving picture industry in California, they will make 30,000 workers idle and put an end to a payroll of $1,500,000 a week. That should be done at least thoughtfully, for it is easier to destroy than to create a $1,500,000 payroll.

Affair Revealed

MRS. JESSIE COSTELLO

KISSING OFFICER 'TELLS' AT TRIAL

SALEM, Mass., July 26.—(Universal.)—Sobbing and hanging his head in shame before the cold glance of the woman whose reputation he was shattering, Edward J. McMahon, handsome "Kiss-and-Tell" Policeman of Peabody, told from the witness stand the intimate story of his affair with Jessie Costello.

He told how, last November, she tried to "pick him up" when she drove by him in her car, how he made love to her the first time they went driving.

The ex-policeman, in a low, halting voice, told the jury that Jessie, accused of poisoning her husband, Fire Capt. William Costello, taunted him when he tried to end their affair with the scornful words:

"You're no sport. This sort of thing goes on all the time."

Costello was found dead in his home February 17. His widow was arrested a month later after autopsy and analysis had disclosed poison in his body.

Rose Allen's Father Dies in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—(AP.)—Horace Allen, father of Edward H. B. Allen and Rose Allen, who figured in the society slaying of Francis A. Donaldon, III, two years ago, died yesterday of a heart attack. He was 57, and had been in ill health for some time.

Edward Allen shot Donaldson because of his attentions to Rose Allen and was acquitted of a murder charge by a jury.

Novelist Loses Suit Over Gambling Loan

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(AP.)—A $220 judgment against Nina Wilcox Putnam Eliot, novelist and short story writer, was awarded in court yesterday to Frank C. Keaney, New York, who said the amount represented the unpaid balance of a loan he made to her four years ago in Monte Carlo.

The writer was married 10 days ago in Nevada to Christian Eliot, English nobleman.

Hungry Wife Sues Cafe Man for Divorce

CHICAGO, July 26.—(INS.)—Although her husband owns a chain of restaurants, Mrs. Herman Liebling filed a complaint today charging that he refuses to provide her with sufficient food.

Pending trial of her bill for divorce, Judge Walter Labuy was asked to allow Mrs. Liebling and her infant daughter $12 a week for their support.

GIRL PENS 'FAREWELL' ON BRIDGE

Death Leap Doubted By Police Scenting Romance

Verses penciled on a bit of note paper and a statement that pretty Mae Rickard, 19, had inquired about marriage were the only clues police had today to explain her disappearance.

The note paper was found in a purse on the Aliquippa-Ambridge Bridge, causing the police at first to believe she jumped into the Ohio River. After investigating, they said they believed romance and not suicide was responsible for her absence.

The girl disappeared from the home of a sister, Mrs. Zigmond Prusin, 322 Franklin avenue, Aliquippa, early Sunday.

Across the back of the note paper found on the bridge, scribbled with lipstick, was the single word:

"Gone."

The purse was found last night by Julius Palletta, of Anderson road, South Heights Borough, Beaver County. He gave it to Police Chief W. L. Ambrose, of Aliquippa. County detectives were questioning him today.

Paletta said he saw a girl pacing back and forth on the bridge, but that she did not go over the rail.

Verses in the note read:

"When it's lamplighting time in the valley
"And in dreams I go back to my home,
"I can see that old lamp in the window;
"It will guide me wherever I roam.

"There's a lamp shining bright in a cabin,
"In a window it's shining for me;
"And I know that my mother is praying
"For the boy she is longing to see."

Mrs. Jean Lintz, of Ailquippa, a friend of the family, said Miss Rickard recently asked her questions about marriage. She wanted to know if one could be married on Sunday, according to Mrs. Lintz.

The girl's home is in Luray, Va.

NEW RIOTS AT FRICK MINES

State Police Details Reinforced to Curb Disorders

Western Pennsylvania's bituminous coal field was rife with disorder and excitement today as miners struck in two counties and returned to work with a wage increase in another.

Simultaneously the H. C. Frick Coke Company announced from its Pittsburgh office that operations would be resumed immediately at seven more mines.

Trouble broke out in several districts of Fayette and Washington counties in the strike of miners of the Frick Company and the Vesta Coal Company.

Full strength strike details of state police were ordered out by Gov. Gifford Pinchot and officials of the United Mine Workers of America were asked to co-operate in an effort to avoid serious disorder.

WAGE INCREASE

Most of the striking miners in Indiana County were reported to have returned to work as a result of the agreement of Central Pennsylvania operators to give the miners a 15 per cent raise in wages.

Four more persons injured in disturbances at mines of the Frick Company today brought the total of casualties to eight for the 24-hour period.

Three of the latest victims are Frank Davis, 43, Smithfield street, Pittsburgh; Mike Joyce, 40, of Hazleton, and William Deney, of Colonial No. 3. All were taken to the Uniontown Hospital. The third victim is Sam Shelton, 35, of Brownsville. He was attacked while attempting to enter Colonial

HORNSBY PILOT OF BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, July 26.—Rogers Hornsby, stormy petrel of National League baseball for many years, today was signed to manage the St. Louis Browns, of the American League, for the remainder of this season and in 1934 and 1935. He succeeds Bill Killefer, who recently resigned.

Hornsby, for many years the National League batting champion and the ranking second baseman of the game, played with the St. Louis Cardinals, New York Giants, Boston Braves and Chicago Cubs. He was manager of the Cardinals, Braves and Cubs, in the order named.

This season he has been playing as a reserve infielder for the Cardinals.

U. S. Speeds Reopening Of Banks

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor today informed members of the Pennsylvania congressional delegation that two representatives from his department and the chief national bank examiner were conferring in Cleveland with a view to aid in steps toward opening the 69 Western Pennsylvania banks of the Fourth Federal Reserve District in the hands of conservators.

The comptroller promised every possible measure of co-operation with Federal Reserve officials and the officials of the banks. It is believed that suggestions will be made at the Cleveland conference toward evolving a definite course of action for all the banks requiring assistance.

Wife Trumps His Ace, He Asks Divorce

Two husbands, seeking divorces, testified before Judge Ralph H. Smith today that part of their trouble with their wives was over card games.

Walter J. Renfer, 42, grocery buyer of 4 Brownell street, asking a divorce from Lulu A. Renfer, 34, of 5361 Rosetta street, told the court:

"Because I reminded her she had trumped an ace, she flew into a rage. I was only joking."

Renfer also testified his wife was "pouty, stubborn" and once threatened to shoot him.

Robert F. Croasmun, 26, of 1615 Vance street, Coraopolis, a foreman for a coke and iron company, suing for divorce from Dorothy I. Croasmun, 238 Melville street, Sewickley, testified:

"While we were playing cards with friends we got into an argument. She threw the cards in my face and left the house."

They were married January 14, 1932, and lived together only seven months.

Neither wife contested her husband's suit.

Reconciliation Fading

Dave Quit Prayer For Torch Songs, Aimee's Lament

International News Service.

BALTIMORE, July 26.—"David said he was a child of prayer and wanted to labor in the vineyard. But now it seems he is to become a torch singer."

This is what Sister Aimee Semple MacPherson, apostle of the Four-Square Gospel, had to say upon debarking here today concerning her husband, David Hutton, filing action for divorce.

A process server was to have met her upon arrival, according to rumor, but he failed to show up.

Aimee continued:

"I gave him everything my heart and purse possessed. I loved him when I married him, I loved him when I went to Europe. And I loved him even until now. But there is a limit to what a woman's love can bear.

"Of course, I do not feel that I was cruel to David. Suppose I did send a hoax cable to him that I gave birth to a nine-pound baby? It was only in fun and I thought David would know it was only a joke.

"I don't know why I should idly stand by and let David Hutton divorce me on such grounds of cruelty."

Unlike her husband, Aimee said today she had turned down a fat vaudeville contract. The contract, she said, called for six weeks booking at $8,000 per week, and the offer was made by a New York theatrical agent.

Questioned about a report that a reconciliation would be affected, the evangelist replied:

"I would be less surprised at news of reconciliation than at the divorce, but neither is Mr. Hutton here to greet me nor have I received a word from him."

RISE IN GRAINS LIFTS STOCKS

NEW YORK, July 26.—(INS.)—Rising values on the Chicago grain pit, where wheat rose more than 3 cents a bushel, came to the support of a sagging stock market today.

Stocks were under pressure after a steady opening and lost 1 to 2 points when grains came to the rescue. The selling was absorbed by a rush of buying which brought gains of 1 to more than 4 points.

The motor shares led the recovery, aided by the gain in General Motors' earnings in the last quarter. Close behind were the repeal shares and the farm stocks, with the whole list shaking off its earlier heaviness.

Trading in the stock market started at 11 o'clock under the revised rules for the shortened sessions to aid overworked brokerage staffs. It closed at 2 o'clock.

6,000,000 WILL RETURN TO WORK IN MONTH, GOVERNMENT SAYS

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt today declared the industrial recovery program for shorter working hours and higher wages to be a success.

Meeting with reporters at the White House while pledges of support continued to arrive, he based his judgment on 12,000 replies already received from every section to his appeal to put a new charter for American industry into immediate effect.

Meanwhile at the hard-working Industrial Recovery Administration, hearings progressed on individual wage and working time codes for the oil, lumber and men's clothing industries.

Mr. Roosevelt was described as convinced that the "new deal" of a shorter working week and higher wages will go into effect almost immediately in the vast majority of industries.

While he has not had opportunity to read all of the telegrams, he rejoiced over the public response.

The recovery chieftains who have made a hurried survey of the replies of employers, joined the President in declaring the campaign a success.

Hugh S. Johnson, the administrator, predicted the reemployment of between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 before Labor Day.

HEARINGS ON TWO CODES

Opening hearings on proposed codes of competition for the men's clothing industry, Johnson told those assembled:

"You have the opportunity to stabilize industry and get away from abuses hurtful to the workers, manufacturers and the people who buy.

"It also happens that we have the worst unemployment situation the country has ever known and you can help iron out that condition."

He reminded that the hearings were not battlegrounds, but were "places for public-spirited people to try to arrive at something without doing violence to anyone and see if we can reach some median way to meet the situation."

HONOR INSIGNIA

Action was taken to prevent the premature or unauthorized distribution of the "NRA" insignia to be worn by business organizations co-operating with the President.

After receiving reports from Philadelphia that an organization was offering for sale the buttons bearing the inscription, "We do our part," and representing them as official, Thomas H. Hammond, one of the administration's public relations chiefs, asked the Department of Commerce representative in the city to contact the firm. If reports are borne out, he was asked to seek the aid of city authorities in halting the sales.

Should this fail, Hammond will

Threatening Weather Prevents Pirate Game

The third clash of the series between the Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs, scheduled at Forbes Field this afternoon, was called off on account of threatening weather.

The postponed game will be played off on Friday, August 11, an open date on the schedule.

Labor Lauds Ban On Steel, Coal Company Unions

Leaders of labor organizations today hailed as a great victory the stand of Donald Richberg, general counsel of the Recovery Administration, upholding the rights of workers to organize and opposing attempts of the steel and coal companies to limit representation to company-sponsored unions.

P. T. Fagan, district president of the United Mine Workers of America, said:

"We have always understood it that way—that we are now to have collective bargaining in actuality. The steel companies think that Hoover and Mellon still are in Washington.

SEES OPPORTUNITY

"Right now labor has the best opportunity of its life to unite and organize. We're on the right road to recovery if labor and big and little industries will cooperate with the Recovery Administration."

Richberg, in an address last night in Washington, said definitely that industries shall not be allowed to write company union provisions into their codes of fair competition.

He declared:

"Let it be understood that the provisions (of the recovery law) which confer the right of collective bargaining, self-organization and representation of employes by representatives of their own choosing, are requirements which must be in-

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP.)—Frederick Martin, a newspaper vendor who is blind, was stabbed in the abdomen. Police held a suspect without bail after Martin identified him by his voice.

Sterilization Decreed 'To Save Nazi Nation'

BERLIN, July 26. — (INS.)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler's cabinet today decreed a law "for the prevention of a degenerate young generation," and providing for voluntary or compulsory sterilization of all persons suffering from hereditary diseases.

The law will become effective January 1, 1934. Under it anyone suffering from one of several diseases, including chronic alcoholism, may be sterilized if his children are regarded as certain to inherit the maladies.

Special sterilization courts, consisting of a judge and two physicians, will decide secretly whether the operation is to be performed.

Persons ordered sterilized will be permitted to appeal to a supreme court of sterilization. If this court upholds the lower tribunal the operation may be performed against the patient's will.

A law decreed simultaneously by the cabinet provides for compulsory sterilization of sex criminals.

It was officially pointed out that sterilization is regarded as necessary to stave off a threatening degeneration of the nation, and that while the healthy families have an average of only one or two children, degenerate families have an average of four.

DRYS TO ATTACK LEGALITY OF REPEAL CONVENTIONS

SEEK TO BALK WET TIDE IN COURTS

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 26 — Organized drys will block repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment by attacking the constitutionality of the conventions in most of the 20 successive states that ratified the repealing resolution, Canon William Sheafe Chase, Episcopal cleric, predicted here today.

Canon Chase revealed the drys, rather than dismayed by the overwhelming majorities rolled up for repeal wherever the issue was voted upon this year, would carry their battle into the federal courts and up to the United States Supreme Court in an effort to keep the Eighteenth Amendment intact.

He declared most of the ratifying conventions, that have acted to date, were based upon the New York and New Jersey laws and were unconstitutional because they included delegates elected at large.

The cleric supported his contention by an opinion of the Supreme Court of Maine, which ruled conventions, elected to ratify constitutional amendments, would have to be composed of delegates elected from local districts and not from the state at large.

HERALDS DEFEAT

Canon Chase said:

Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment will be defeated. I am reasonably confident the elections in all the states, where the law authorizing them was similar to that in New York and New Jersey—where delegates at large constituted the large majority of the state convention—will be declared unconstitutional in the Supreme Court.

"These elections will be declared void by the Supreme Court, in my judgment, on the same ground stated by the Supreme Court of the State of Maine in reply to an inquiry from the Senate of that state. The Maine court, after reviewing constitutional history, said:

"'It is evident, therefore, that in every constitutional convention of which we have knowledge, delegates have been chosen not at large, but from the various localities within the state. By this method, the requirement has been met that the members of that body selected to make modifications in the fundamental law should fairly represent the people, whom they serve.

"'In view of the foregoing, we do not deem it permissible for the state, under the terms of Article 5 of the Federal Constitution, to organize a convention where the delegates, entitled to participate, are elected at large.'

CONFIDENT IN COURT

Canon Chase explained:

"The contention will be such conventions, as have been held in most of the states reported wet, are not truly representative as both parties required in their platforms and were not deliberate bodies as was clearly contemplated by those who wrote the Constitution.

"I am confident the Supreme Court will uphold this view, because it is not a question in which the welfare of prohibition is the chief issue but a question whether the United States shall continue to be a representative government or a pure democracy. The conventions thus far held have mostly been merely referenda and not conventions. The constitution was careful not to provide a government directly controlled by referenda, but in every case provided for government through representatives of the people."

The Episcopal cleric, while conducting a crusade for "honest government," actually has become a leader of the anti-repeal movement. He recently declared prohibition was "not my chief hobby." He said:

"Honest government always has been my chief hobby and it is more important now than ever before because dishonest government caused the panic."

RIOTING RESUMED AT FRICK MINES

No. 3, according to the report at Brownsville Hospital.

DEPUTY INJURED

Others injured in disorders late yesterday included:

John Kuh, 40, a deputy, of Grindstone; Wayne Snell, 21, of Uniontown; Emmett Cole, 42, and his brother, Merrill, 25, both of Hopwood, and Mike Mazurek, 54, of Leisenring.

Sporadic fighting between pickets and company police was reported from Colonial No. 3 today when it was charged by union leaders, the police threw tear gas into the picket line in an effort to make the strikers disperse. Company Policeman Deney is alleged to have fired two shots over the heads of the crowd before he went down in a rush of the strikers. He was badly beaten, according to reports.

PICKETS ARRIVED

Trouble last night centered around the Frick-owned Colonial No. 4 mine, where pickets armed with clubs were reported to have gathered to prevent men from going to work on the night shift.

The Uniontown detail of state police under Sergt. William Gleason was ordered into the field yesterday, but was unable to cope with the situation.

Gov. Pinchot sent reinforcements into the area from Greensburg last night and Capt. Jacob Mauk, in command of Troop A, moved in early today with a force of 40 men.

Thomas Moses, president of the Frick Company, gave his version of the controversy here today. He said the company had no quarrel with the United Mine Workers of America, but declared:

"We do not think our men want recognition of the United Mine Workers."

MINE GUARDS SCORED

Charges that the company has recruited its company-owned police force to full strike strength by the addition of 100 extra men were hurled today by William Feeney, district president of the United Mine Workers at Brownsville. He termed the company police "thugs" and "sluggers," and declared they were intimidating union men.

Miss Elizabeth Wight, Philadelphia social worker on a tour of Western Pennsylvania mines in a campaign against the company-owned town by the Pennsylvania Security League, visited nearly a dozen mines in Indiana County yesterday.

She was told, she said, that county relief was being used as a club to compel striking miners to return to work.

MISSOURI DRY VOTE FOUGHT

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., July 26.—(AP.)—A mandamus suit seeking to compel Dwight H. Brown, Secretary of State, to accept referendum petitions on the act providing for Missouri's vote on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the bill which legalized 3.2 beer in the state was filed in Cole County Court today by F. A. Tate, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League.

Tate sought to file the petitions with Brown last week, but the secretary of state refused to accept them, saying he had been advised that neither act is subject to the referendum.

It was expected that Circuit Judge Nike G. Sevier would not issue an alternative writ, as asked by Tate but would set the two cases for hearing on their merits.

2,100 CAMBRIA MINERS STRIKE

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 26.—More than 2,100 mine workers in Cambria County are on strike today, the result of four coal companies refusing to recognize checkweighmen selected by the local unions.

More than 700 miners are out at the Sonman Shaft Coal Company, near Portage, and the Logan Coal Company at Beaverdale, officials of the companies announcing the unions' checkweighmen were not acceptable to the company, because they had not been selected from regular working personnel at the mines.

Three hundred mine workers also are on strike at the Henrietta Coal Company at Llanfair and Krayn, while 400 miners of the C. A. Hughes Company were not working at Bens Creek.

Steubenville Mine Closed by Strike

STEUBENVILLE, O., April 26—The Monaca mine at Kenwood employing 125 men was closed today following a strike. The men asked a pay increase to $3.20, which is general in the Eastern Ohio field. The Morilla mine at Adena also was closed, 40 miners striking for a checkweighman.

Air Pilots' Strike Hinges on Code

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—Planes of the United States Air Lines were flying on regular schedule today after a threatened strike of the 260 pilots and co-pilots had been averted when they agreed to continue to work on their present salary basis until an aeronautical industry code is submitted.

Paid on a time and milage basis, the pilots claimed that the new 155-mile-an-hour planes put into service recently by United had considerably reduced their incomes. The old transport planes were capable of doing 112 miles an hour.

Fisk Tire Plant Crippled by Strike

CHICOPEE, Mass., July 26.—(AP.)—Production at the Fisk Rubber Corporation plant was virtually halted today by a wage strike of 300 tiremakers. A group of maintenance men joined the strikers.

Girl Disrobes, But Shuns Water and Saves Swimmer

PAULSBORO, N. J., July 26.—(AP.)—The girl who took her clothes off, but didn't go in the water, thereby saved the life of the girl who went swimming without removing anything, much less hanging it on a hickory limb.

Miss Stephani Boguti, 17, one of a group which lost an oarlock from their boat in the Delaware River, plunged fully clad into the water to go for help. The distance was too great. While Harry Goodwin tried to keep the struggling girl afloat, Olga Strumelack, also 17, waved her dress as a distress signal and a tugboat came from shore to make the rescue.

Tear Gas Routs Pickets In Glass Plant Strike

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 26.—(AP.)—Police were called early today a second time to prevent molestation of workers by pickets at a Hazel-Atlas Glass Company plant, where nearly 1,000 are striking for higher wages.

After attending a conference with company officials and a committee of strikers which failed to reach a compromise, Mayor Robert E. Griffiths accompanied officers to the plant as workers were coming off duty at 2:30 a. m.

Pickets refrained from molesting men at the plant, but pursued some of them on their way home. No injuries were reported.

Meantime rumors of another strike at the Tygart Valley Glass Company made police doubly alert.

Constables used tear gas to disperse a crowd of 500 pickets at one of the three Hazel-Atlas plants last night. They said the pickets were trying to persuade girl workers to join the strike, and were blocking traffic. Ordered to move on, the pickets refused. Two bombs enforced the order successfully.

'Auto Company Head Seeks Strike Truce

BUTLER, Pa., July 26.—(AP.)—R. C. Gill, president of the American Austin Car Company, returned to Butler yesterday in a move to settle the strike of 300 employes demanding higher pay.

Although workers are picketing the automobile plant, there have been no demonstrations, officers said.

U. S. HOME LOAN BONDS UPHELD BY MAYS HERE

Mortgage Firms Ready To Accept Security State Head Says

As hurried preparations were under way here today for opening of Pittsburgh's branch of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Tuesday, Jacob H. Mays, state manager of the corporation, expressed confidence that its bonds will be readily negotiable.

Any doubts as to their worth, he said, could be allayed by the readiness of mortgage companies and individuals to accept them. Mays said:

"One of the country's largest mortgage firms recently promised to accept up to $45,000,000 of the 18-year, 4 per cent Home Owners' Loan Corporation bonds. Certainly they wouldn't be interested if the securities were to sell at a large discount."

Meanwhile, from Washington came reports that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will accept the Corporation's bonds as security for loans to banks and similar institutions up to 80 per cent of the bonds' face value.

Mays predicted announcement of the Pittsburgh branch's personnel either today or tomorrow. L. G. Lichliter will be in charge of the Western Pennsylvania office here.

Mays predicted a flood of applications for loans upon opening of the office. He said:

"In extreme emergency, it might be possible to push through a loan in two weeks. The average length of time will be a month.

"But if a huge pile of applications comes in in the first few days, you can understand that the late ones may take two months or more.

"Careful appraisal of property, search of titles and other investigation and scrutiny is necessary. This takes time.

"We are going to be conservative and conomical. Pittsburgh is not going to have a huge office force. This is to be a going organization and it must pay off its bonds.

"But we are here to serve the public and everything we can do will be done, even to the extent of trying to persuade mortgageholders to accept our bonds in relief of mortgages."

Mays said that personal applications for loans are necessary—mailed applications cannot be accepted.

RECOVERY PLAN PUTS UTILITIES 'ON THE SPOT'

Lower Rates Likely Under 'New Deal' Control Scheme

By M. L. RAMSAY
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Substantial federal control and influence over the power trust and other utilities appeared imminent today, with the probable result of lower rates for many consumers.

Officials declared federal intervention was inevitable in the swift working out of President Roosevelt's national recovery program. The utilities will be reached through the industrial codes.

Speedy developments in the recovery program have put the utilities "on the spot." Fearing restrictions on their rates and finances from the President and his aides, they have thus far withheld a code for self-regulation.

PLAN TO RUSH CODE

They were understood to be planning to rush a code through however, to escape having one thrust upon them. Roosevelt has full power to draft and promulgate such a code unless the utilities act by September 1.

Administration leaders predicted strong pressure for lower electric rates. Many feel the rates are out of line with wages and purchasing power and an obstruction to recovery.

Rates may be influenced, and aired at the code hearings, under these heads:

Relation of living costs to purchasing power created by wages the industry pays.

Production costs, as related to selling prices and profits.

Prohibition of monopolies, always permitted for local utilities by common consent, but never tested legally on the present vast holding company scale.

Protection of consumers.

Electric Rate Revision In State Waits 'Trend'

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 26.—(AP.)—Possible downward revision of electric rates, sought by the Public Service Commission where company statements show high earnings, will await determination of economic and price trends.

Because of present uncertainty the commission yesterday adjourned until September 1 further conferences with officials of the Scranton Electric Company.

C. Jay Goodnough, chairman of the commission since Gov. Pinchot ousted Clyde L. King, said that the commissioners and company officials agreed business trends will be more definite by that time.

Little progress toward a voluntary reduction in rates was indicated, company officials taking the stand that rising prices will increase expenses and curtail profits.

Yesterday's conference was the first since last year, the commission's campaign having been interrupted by the legal battle over King's status. He was finally ousted by the Supreme Court.

Whoa, Dobbin! No Galloping Under New Code

LANCASTER, Pa., July 26.—(INS.)—They're putting the leash on Ol' Dobbin down this way. Twelve miles an hour is the speed limit—and no galloping.

These regulations today were carried in the new traffic code introduced in City Council.

Traffic regulations enacted since 1823 are continued in the new code as a matter of record. Bicycles may not travel more than three abreast and at night they must be equipped with bells and lights.

BROTHERHOOD BANK PAYS

A final dividend of 3.3 per cent was paid today to 2,500 depositors of the old Brotherhood Savings and Trust Company, 241 Fourth avenue, bringing the total to 98.3 per cent.

Deposits on hand when the institution closed, October 16, 1926, were about $470,000, according to Frank W. Jackson, deputy receiver of the State Banking Department in charge of liquidation.

The bank, representing labor's experiment in the banking business, came into the limelight and subsequently was closed through expose of a big bond purchase swindle.

Officers of the institution were tried and acquitted. Two men not connected with the bank served prison terms in the case.

TIRES ADVANCE 10 PER CENT

AKRON, O., July 26.—(INS.)—Eight major Akron rubber companies today announced a flat increase of 10 per cent in automomile tire prices, effective immediately.

The concerns joining in the move were Goodyear, Goodrich, Firestone, General, Mohawk, India, Seiberling and Falls.

Advances in the costs of crude rubber and cotton, the latter rising because of curtailed machine working hours in the textile industry, were given as the causes for the tire boosts.

Possibility of another increase next week, following the imposition of the processing tax on cotton August 1, was indicated as the 10 per cent advance was announced.

Housewives Charge Food Profiteering

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 26.—(INS.)—Housewives here complain of the sudden jump in prices of certain foods within the last few days. They charged profiteering and proposed to report instances directly to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and President Roosevelt.

U. S. FIGHTING KIDNAPING ON MANY FRONTS

Silence Cloaks Fate Of Missing O'Connell And Rich Oil Man

Associated Press.

On a dozen fronts the agencies of federal government fought crime today.

At Washington, at Albany, in the Middle West and on the Pacific Coast there were new evidences of determination to crush the kidnap breed.

President Roosevelt let it be plainly known that he wants established a super-relief force of federal agents to step in and check the growth of organized crime—especially kidnaping.

Governors of states, meeting in San Francisco, added their voices to demands for action. Gov. Balzar, of Nevada, said:

"It is up to us individual governors to co-operate, possibly with the federal government, to do something drastic to stop these organized gangs."

Gov. White, of Ohio, speaking at the governors' conference, advocated co-operation between states and the federal government to check kidnaping and other crimes.

Gov. Lehman, of New York, with a kidnaping (as yet unsolved) done almost in the shadow of the Capitol at Albany, indicated he would demand enactment of drastic laws against kidnapers.

PUBLIC AROUSED

In several parts of the country there were definite signs today that public indignation against criminals was having results. Roger Touhy, and three men classified as members of his Chicago gang, are held at Milwaukee on charges growing out of the William Hamm, Jr., kidnaping in St. Paul, Minn.

A former convict is on trial in Kansas City for the kidnaping last May of Mary McElroy, daughter of the city manager. At St. Louis authorities told of a confession that they hope will speed solution of the kidnaping of August Luer, of Alton, Ill., July 11.

Elsewhere there was other evidence of public wrath against the recent successful forays of criminals. The director of the Department of Public Safety of Indiana called for the organization of modern "minute men" in every community. These groups would spring into action at first word of any crime, and by the use of communication systems, operating through a central station, would draw a net tightly around the fleeing desperadoes.

TWO STILL MISSING

In Morrison, Tenn., citizens fought bank robbers, an evidence of public determination to drive out crime. One member of the posse was killed and two men were captured.

Despite the attack on crime by these several agencies, acts of violence showed no signs of abating. Two men are still in the hands of kidnapers—Lieut. John J. O'Connell, Jr., of Albany, N. Y., and Charles F. Urschel, of Oklahoma City.

The first has been missing nearly three weeks, held for a reported $250,000 ransom. The abductors of the latter have not, so far as has been announced, communicated any demands.

At Boston, Theodore C. Haffenreffer, head of one of New England's largest breweries, was closely guarded today from those who attempted to extort $15,000 under threat of death.

The brewer was in seclusion at a South Hampton, N. H., summer home.

At Catskill, N. Y., Frank Early, who was released from Great Meadow Prison three weeks ago, was turned over to Putnam County authorities on a charge of kidnaping Miss Edia Neumogen, of Lake Mahopac, when she stopped her automobile before a traffic light.

Farm Woman Freed In Luer Kidnaping

LINCOLN, Neb., July 26.—(AP.)—Mrs. Vivian Cunningham, who was taken from her work on a Nebraska farm for questioning in the August Luer kidnaping, last night went happily back—free of suspicion.

'MISS BILL' AFTER HER TUMBLE

VIRGINIA A. (BILL) FAIRMON, 17, IN ST. FRANCIS HOSPITAL . . . . . SHE HAD A FALL

"Bill"—her friends all call her that—today suffering internal injuries, probable hip fracture, the consequence of her fall while she was climbing among the girders of the Bloomfield Bridge. She had a 30-foot fall. Said she: "My shoes were wet." This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Girl Climbing Bridge Girders Hurt in Fall

While climbing girders under the Bloomfield Bridge last evening, she missed her footing and fell 30 feet to the playground.

Two playground instructors, Dorothy Walters and Mary A. Manning, found her unconscious and took her to the hospital. She was wearing men's trousers, shirt, tennis shoes and a leather wrist band. She regained consciousness as she was being carried in.

Today from her bed she said ruefully:

"I have done that stunt several times and this is the first time I ever had an accident. My tennis shoes were wet, and I slipped. I like to climb and wear boy's clothes. I guess that is why all my friends call me Bill."

Virginia lives at 331 Darlington street. She assists at directing activities at the playground in her spare time.

IMPRESARIO'S DAUGHTER GONE, OPERA POSTPONED

SPONSOR QUITS, WILL REDEEM TICKETS

Box Office Hints Lack Of Support as Real Cause

The disappearance of a 16-year-old girl today was given as the reason for the postponement of the Pittsburgh Civic Opera Company's performance at Forbes Field tomorrow.

But there were other reasons.

Maurice Frank, the director, is so upset over the absence of his daughter, Bernice, that he cannot come to Pittsburgh, according to his manager, Philip Rossiter.

SPONSOR WITHDRAWS

However, the Duquesne Commandery, Knights Templar, has withdrawn as sponsor of the opera. George Adams, chairman of the commandery's entertainment committee, announced today that purchasers of tickets from the commandery could have either their money back or tickets to the Summer Playhouse attractions.

At the opera company's office today a representative said other ticket purchasers also could have their money refunded. He said the postponement was due to lack of public support.

Bernice disappeared in New York June 20, leaving a note in which she promised to get in touch with her parents by July 20, Rossiter said. He added that she still is missing, and her father fears foul play.

NEW DATE SET

Consequently the opera "Pagliacci," has been set back to August 10, Rossiter said.

Rossiter was out of the city today. In New York Frank could not be located. At the Paramount Hotel, where he lived, attendants said he had checked out last night without leaving an address.

William Benswanger, president of the company which controls Forbes Field, said that Rossiter had informed him of the postponement last night, explaining that more time was needed to perfect the opera company's plans.

International News Service.

SHOAL HARBOR, Newfoundland, July 26.—With one of its number forced down en route for repairs, Gen. Italo Balbo's Italian seaplane armada this afternoon reached Shoal Harbor, starting point of a non-stop flight back to Europe.

The first triad descended on the placid waters of the harbor at 12:40 p. m. The approaching seaplanes had been first sighted by watchers five minutes earlier.

The armada took off from Shediac, New Brunswick, between 8:45 a. m. and 8:56 a. m. One of the planes was forced down for repairs at Victoria Harbor, Prince Edward Island, approximately 40 miles from the starting point.

The first detachment completed the 500 miles between Shediac and Shoal Harbor in 3 hours and 55 minutes. The squadron made fast time on this leg of the journey—the last lap before Gen. Balbo's impressive expedition starts back across the ocean for Orbetello, Italy.

2 SLAIN, PRISON ESCAPE PLOT BLAMED

Gunmen Kill Deputy And Convict on Way To Penitentiary

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 26.—(AP.)—A belief that a vain effort to free Ralph Harper, 19, confessed robber, caused his death, the slaying of one deputy and injuries to another officer, was expressed today by R. Carl Andrews, sheriff of Kanawha County.

Andrews said the four gunmen who fired into an automobile carrying Harper to the penitentiary last night to serve a 25-year sentence for armed robbery, had planned a bold effort to effect his escape.

It was knowledge of the plans to free the youth that prompted officers to start to the penitentiary with him a few hours after he was sentenced, the sheriff said.

Andrews' statement was made after long and careful questioning of 11 persons rounded up in an effort to identify the gunmen who took Harper from the officers in Jackson County and abandoned his body an hour later less than a block away from his father's home in Huntington.

DOUBT REVENGE THEORY

Officers previously had expressed doubt as to whether Harper's death resulted from revenge for some underworld grudge or occurred accidentally in an attempt to free him.

All of those held, officers said, were arrested merely on the possibility that they might furnish clues to the identity of the four men that shot swiftly into the officers' car, killing Roy Shamblin, deputy, and fatally wounding Harper, a 19-year-old Huntington youth.

George L. Dudley, another deputy, assigned to take Harper to the penitentiary after he was sentenced on a plea of guilty to robbing a Charleston shoe store, was wounded in the running gun battle along the Sissonsville road.

LEFT DEPUTY TO DIE

He and other officers were unable to state whether Harper was intentionally slain by the gunmen or whether the attack was an effort to free him.

Dudley, in a Charleston hospital, described the gunmen, saying two of them bore a resemblance to the slain prisoner. He told of a car following his automobile for nearly 20 miles before opening fire.

He said that after the firing ended, two of the men—there were four in the car—dragged him from his seat and threw him over a steep hill. He added:

"One of them said—"Damn you, that's the last of you, Big Boy."

SLAYER OF GIRL GETS 15 YEARS

VIEGE Switzerland, July 26.—(INS.)—Swift punishment was meted out today to Henri Walther, 20-year-old Swiss peasant, for the murder of Miss Jerane Ibershoff, of Cleveland, O., former Smith College girl.

He was found guilty by a presiding judge here and sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Miss Jerane Ibershoff, 21, of Cleveland, a student at Smith College, was touring Europe with her sister, Helen. While in Switzerland she set out alone on a bicycle from Zermatt to Viege while her sister stopped to get a bicycle which had been repaired. They were to meet later in Viege.

When Jerane did not appear at Viege, Helen spent all night searching the mountains on foot. At dawn gendarmes told her the body of her sister had been found at the foot of Zermatt Mountain.

The police said Walther admitted stopping Miss Ibershoff because "he had a desire to molest her," but that she resisted so strenuously that he at length picked up a rock and struck her on the head.

'BRODIE' FREED, GETS ADVICE

George Thompson, 39, of 6 Belmont court, the "Steve Brodie" who won a $10 wager by leaping from the West End-North Side Bridge, was discharged in North Side Police Court today with some free advice.

Magistrate John J. Sweeney handed out the advice. It was:

"The next time, be sure you get the money first."

Thompson testified a stranger offered the money to him and two companions early Monday. All three climbed on the bridge, but Thompson was the only one who jumped. When he was pulled out, bruised and shaken, the stranger had disappeared.

Thompson was in Allegheny General Hospital until yesterday.

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP.)—Wiley Post rode through New York's canon of acclaim today to receive the plaudits of thousands and the traditional ticker tape tribute for his latest flight around the world.

From the Battery to City Hall he rode along lower Broadway through just such a shouting crowd as he and Harold Gatty were greeted by two years ago, after their world flight.

Post, only man to fly around the world alone and fastest ever to circle the globe, rode in an open car and several times rose to his feet to wave and bow to the cheering crowds.

7 ARMY FLIERS DIE IN CRASH

OCEANSIDE, Cal., July 26.—(AP.)—Twisted metal from a broken wing turned the cockpit of a twin-motored Army amphibian plane into a death trap for seven men.

The wing, shearing off inexplicably at 1,000 feet elevation yesterday, soared away independent of the main body of the wreckage, but investigating officers said today it apparently closed escape hatches in such a manner that the crew of the giant bomber was prevented from leaping with their parachutes with a chance for life.

The dead are: Second Lieut. Carl H. Murray, of Filer, Ida., pilot; Sergt. Archie W. Snodgrass, San Antonio, Tex.; Sergt. Bonnell L. Herrick, Warsaw, Ind.; Pvt. Walter T. Taylor, Los Angeles; Pvt. Stanley Book, Detroit; Pvt. Albert Overend, Coronado, Cal., and Pvt. Vincent Galdin, Grand Rapids, Mich.

The famous flying couple reached the town yesterday.

The supply ship Jelling, carrying a reserve airplane and a pilot, was expected to reach Holstenborg this evening. Original plans had called for the Lindberghs to await the Jelling's arrival at Holstenborg before leaving Godthaab.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, July 26.—(AP.)—The Weather Bureau reported this morning that the storm in the Caribbean probably is passing to the north of Puerto Rico.

Outwardly today showed every sign of hurricane. The sky was so gray that there was scarcely any dawn to mark the end of the night.

Clap of Thunder Causes Loss Of Memory

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—(AP.)—A clap of thunder during a severe electrical storm caused a well-dressed young man of about 26 to lose his memory.

Walking into a police station last night, he said:

"Please don't make fun of me, but I don't know who I am.

SAFE CRACKERS GET $1,000

The safe of the Allegheny Finance Corporation, 6218 Penn avenue, was looted of $1,000 today after it had been blown open, according to a report to police.

The robbery was discovered early today by R. C. Lasher, of Wilkinsburg, manager.

The contents of the safe were strewn about the floor.

Offices of the Union Acceptance Company, an affiliated company, adjoining, also were ransacked, but nothing was taken, police said.

Police declared they believed the men used gloves in blowing the safe, as they were unable to find fingerprints.

The police believe the safecrackers might have gained entrance through MacDougall's Dancing Academy on the third floor of the building.

JAPAN, FRANCE CLASH LOOMS

TOKIO, July 26.—(AP.)—An investigation to determine whether Japan would be justified in contesting France's recently announced occupation of nine hitherto ownerless Coral islands is being conducted by the foreign office.

The islands, which lie between the Philippines and French Indo-China, include Thitu and Twin islands, to which the nearest large occupied area is Palawan.

A foreign office spokesman revealed today that several Japanese traders are interested in a guano and phosphate collecting enterprise intermittently carried on in these and neighboring islands.

Keisaburo Hashimoto, member of the House of Peers and an outstanding industrialist, petitioned the foreign office or the navy office to annex the islands.

CUBA AMNESTY BILL SIGNED

HAVANA, July 26.—(INS.)—President Gerardo Machado took a decisive step today to restore Cuba to normal life by signing an amnesty bill freeing all political prisoners convicted since the beginning of 1927.

At the same time, the President, who for years has ruled the republic as a virtual dictator and has weathered a series of revolutionary uprisings, restored constitutional guarantees in Havana province, suspend martial law.

This action was regarded as a forerunner to eventual restoration of constitutional rights in all parts of the island.

Signing of the amnesty bill followed its passage by the House of Representatives and the Senate. The bill was in line with the mediatory activities of United States Ambassador Sumner Welles.

Shaw Resents Notice Of 77th Birthday

MALVERN, England, July 26.—(AP.)—George Bernard Shaw was peeved today that special notice should be taken of his seventy-seventh birthday. He said:

"The last celebration of my birthday was when I was 70, and it's not decent to remind people of their birthday after they have passed that age."

Shaw by his own reckoning should be only 27 years old today. He declares:

"I am 50 years ahead of the rest of the world."

The master of paradox and sarcasm is stepping gaily down the years, walking and woodchopping and keeping rigidly to the vegetarian diet without alcohol or tobacco which he has followed for decades.

He has been exceptionally quiet since his return from the United States at the finish of his world tour last April.

Pays Million for Part Of 'Busiest Corner'

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—One part of the "world's busiest corner" has changed hands for a consideration of $1,000,000.

The northeast corner of State and Madison streets, known as the "world's busiest corner," was purchased by Mrs. Lolita Sheldon Armour, of suburban Lake Forest, from the estate of Lady Ethel Field Beatty, daughter of Marshall Field, it was learned today.

The late Marshall Field, Chicago merchant prince, bought this ground, now part of the site of a department store, for $53,390 in 1876. It fronts but 53.2 feet on State street and 150.5 feet on Madison, and is about the size of an ordinary residence lot.

Mrs. Armour, who regained a lost fortune through an investment in an oil-cracking process, purchased the property as an investment. The seller was the Northern Trust Company, trustee under the will of Marshall Field, which settled $5,000,000 in a trust for his daughter, Ethel. The later left $1,000,000 each to her English husband, Admiral David Beatty, and to her three sons.

Lady Beatty died in 1932.

START LEGAL WAR TO SAVE SCHOOLS

Universal Service.

CHICAGO, July 26.—Legal proceedings to prevent the Board of Education from carrying out its school-wrecking program will be filed in the courts today by Edward G. Woods, counsel for the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

In a petition for an injunction, the lawyer will call to the court's attention that the program is not only contrary to the best interests of the pupils, but that it also involves direct violation of the statutes.

The petition will point out that the proposed abolition of the Chicago parental school and the abolition or curtailment of other educational services of the Chicago schools would be contrary to specific requirement of the Otis law, under which the system is operated.

The announcement of the appeal to the courts to save the schools from the hands of the wreckers game on the eve of what was scheduled to be a crisis in the battle.

Leaders in the great crusade to protect the educational services of the system for the city's half million school students planned to carry their fight today into the rooms of the Board of Education, where the trustees were to meet to carry out their school-wrecking program.

Armed with petitions bearing the names of 200,000 parents and other citizens, the defenders of the school children's welfare planned to array themselves against the school trustees in their drastic curtailment program.

COUNTY PARKS' BOOST DELAYED

County Commissioner C. C. McGovern will not take to the radio to interest people in the county parks until the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company sets a permanent and reasonable rate for bus fares to the parks, he declared yesterday.

Questioned by Commissioner C. M. Barr as to the agreement with the company for a 30-cent rate, McGovern said:

"They're hunting evidence. They're not interested in getting a standard reasonable rate to the parks. I'll not take to the radio to help that utility company until their tariff is right and permanent."

The company had announced a two weeks' trial.

Plans to use the radio to enlarge attendance at the parks were discussed at several previous meetings of the Commissioners.

NEW MILK WAR AT HARRISBURG

CARLISLE, Pa., July 26.—(INS.)—After three months of futile negotiations, 300 farmers renewed their war upon milk dealers today and picketed milk routes tapping the Cumberland County area.

The embattled farmers stopped trucks carrying milk to dealers at Harrisburg, and other points, who have refused to meet their marketing terms. In three instances, milk was dumped into the roadside.

Their action followed a meeting of the Capital City Milk Producers Association here last night when it was decided to supply only those dealers who agreed to pay $1.70 per 100 pounds of 4 per cent butter-fat milk.

Ten dealers, among them most of the large Harrisburg firms, were on the farmers' "blacklist" today. Twelve signed up.

Chicago Breweries Face Strike Tieup

CHICAGO, July 26.—(INS.)—Chicago's breweries faced the possibility of a tieup today with the vote of Local No. 399 of the Operating Engineers' Union to go on strike at noon.

The strike will be carried out unless the brewers yield to the union demand for an increase in hourly wages and a five-day week. Union members now get $1.07½ an hour for a 48 hour week. They are asking for $1.25 an hour and a 40-hour week.

Maccabees Elect Two Pittsburghers

DETROIT, July 26.—(AP.)—Almost 1,000 delegates and visitors from the United States and Canada yesterday registered at the seventeenth quadrennial meeting of the Maccabees.

Election of officers took place, and E. W. Thompson, Detroit, was elevated to supreme commander, succeeding D. J. Coakley, also of Detroit. J. B. Gloeckner, of Pittsburgh, was chosen master at arms. W. E. Blaney, of Pittsburgh, was named to the board of directors.

Missouri 'New Deal' Steed for Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP.)—New Deal, a spirited chestnut horse, came to the White House today from Missouri for President Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt, with a broad smile and words of thanks, received New Deal on the White House grounds from Missouri admirers headed by Senator Clark.

MAN, WIFE HELD IN BIBLE THEFT

Richard W. Morgan, 53, and his wife, Eva, 49, were held for court on charges of larceny today in North Side Police Court in connection with the theft of a Bible and other household effects from a dead man.

The Morgans, houseboat neighbors of Edward Gabell, who died in his houseboat home beneath the Manchester Bridge last Saturday, told Magistrate John J. Sweeney they took the things for safekeeping.

Relatives of the dead man complained to police who said they found the Bible and other household articles in the Morgan home.

COUNTY TO PAY ROAD CLAIM

County Commissioners yesterday settled two old problems.

They agreed to pay $7,500 to the J. W. Butler Contracting Company as additional charges on paving the Mowry-Gilhall and Cochrane Mill roads. The company had asked $35,000.

Fire Marshal Thomas L. Pfarr was put on the county payrool at $100 a month. This followed consideration of Pfarr's six-month expense account of $1,775, payment of which was refused. McGovern ordered that Pfarr be given a desk in County Investigator Leo Riordan's office, and wisecracked that he could have a red hat.

Wife Obtains Ban Against Divorcee

CHICAGO, July 26.—(INS.)—An injunction obtained by Mrs. Agatha B. Overbagh today restrained Mrs. Luella S. Tyler, a divorcee, from molesting the former's husband, Donald Cameron Overbagh, a promoter.

Man Kills Self, Ill Health Blamed

Despondent over ill-health, John Konstanzeier, 58, of 707 Virginia avenue extension, Aspinwall, shot himself in the right temple, according to Aspinwall police.

New York Speeds Traffic Arrests

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP.)—No longer will the traffic officer have to wait around for an hour or so to catch a traffic violator trying to slip away.

A new ordinance allows the policeman to paste a sticker on the windshield, requiring the owner of the car, no matter who was driving at the time of the violation, to appear in court.

INJURY OF BOY STIRS PROTEST

Residents in the vicinity of Bonvue street, North Side, today protested to city authorities against the dangers to children in an abandoned pumping station in Bonvue street, near Perrysville avenue.

The residents sent special delivery letters to Council after learning that Ralph Beran, 7, of 1745 Cowley street, fell through a hole in the floor of the building yesterday. Bruised and cut, he was treated at Allegheny General Hospital.

Entrances to the building were boarded, but the barriers were removed by children or tramps, police said.

BISHOP ORDERS AID FOR DEAF

Bishop Hugh C. Boyle has ordered a collection in churches of the Pittsburgh Diocese, August 6, to help support the De Paul Institute in Brookline.

Council's finance committee approved the proposed expenditure.

U. S. to Campaign For Postal Business

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP.)—The fate of 12,000 postoffice employes caught within the sweep of governmental economy today appeared to rest on the possibility of increased postal business.

While the department made plans for a new tally of mail volume in hope of finding a substantial increase under the new lower rates, officials also were reported to be planning a "sales expansion" program of their own.

This would involve efforts to swing into the postoffice business large volumes of communications now going to other systems because of swifter transmission.

PASTOR FINDS HOME LOOTED

When the Rev. George Schuster, of 459 Fortieth street, returned home with his family last night after a month's vacation, he found the house ransacked. Burglars had forced a cellar window, taking $150 cash from a cedar chest, a child's bank containing $15, and an electric sweeper.

Mr. Schuster is pastoor of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church.

'CARD SLAYING' SEERESS GETS 14 YEARS

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—Fourteen years in prison.

Mrs. Vera Carl, 37, the woman in the "fortune teller" slaying of her husband, George, heard a jury pronounce this judgment upon her on a charge of conspiring to murder her spouse, and then fainted.

She was carried from the courtroom of Judge Rudolph Desort last night—unconscious—after a jury had taken a trifle less than three hours to find her guilty.

'IN THE CARDS'

Mrs. Carl contended that her husband's death was "in the cards"—that is, that a fortune teller told her two days before he was shot to death in his grocery store on July 16, 1932, that she was going to become a widow.

The state argued, however, that Carl was put to death in a plot for Mrs. Carl to obtain the dead man's insurance. The defense counsel replied by asserting that she was merely the victim of a scheme to enable the insurance company to escape payment of the death claim, and argued in support of this contention that Mrs. Carl had not paid the extra premium for double indemnity in the event of violent death.

2 SERVING LIFE

Ivan Grilec, brother of Mrs. Carl and her alleged sweetheart, John Milosic, are now serving life terms for their alleged parts in the plot. Joseph Fess, accused by the state of having been the actual slayer, is still awaiting trial, as is Edward Veselka, accused of having been a party to the alleged conspiracy.

A new trial was asked for Mrs. Carl and she may know the result shortly after August 25, the date fixed for arguments.

She was the second woman to be convicted within less than a week on a similar charge. The other was Mrs. Bessie Opas, whose punishment was set at five years' imprisonment for alleged conspiracy to slay her husband, Marion.

The alleged plot, however, failed.

Misses Brake, Hits Gas, Kills Woman

ST. LOUIS, July 26.—(AP.)—One woman was killed and nine persons were injured, two seriously, on a busy downtown street corner here late yesterday when a Negro chauffeur, attempting to stop his car, stepped on the accelerator instead of the brake.

After striking the pedestrians, the automobile, driven by John Green, 34, continued a block, where it crashed into a mail truck, the gasoline tank of which exploded, burning both machines.

GLORIA STUART

QUITS HUSBAND TO 'SAVE' HOME

HOLLYWOOD, July 26.—(AP.)—Gloria Stuart, screen actress, and Blair Gordon Newell, her sculptor husband, disclosed today they are beginning a trial separation in an effort to save their marriage, which took place five years ago.

The couple said conflicting careers have created incompatibility. Miss Stuart, who has played 17 featured leads in the last 19 months, said she has been at the studio every day and frequently late at night. The actress said:

"We haven't had much time together. It has created friction, so I'm taking a smaller place to live alone. We'll continue to see each other, and in the end, we hope to resume life together."

Two Held for Court In Iron Flask Theft

John L. Gibbs, 37, and Robert Harirs, 28, of Boston Hollow, admitted before Alderman Robert Calhoun, McKeesport, today they had stolen iron flasks valued at $300 from the Columbia Radiator Company. Versailles Township, had broken them to pieces and sold them to a junk dealer for $13.

They were held for court on charges of robbery and selling stolen goods.

'WRONG' VICTIM FOILS GANG

PASADENA, Cal., July 26.—(INS.)—A kidnaping for ransom was thwarted early today when the assailants seized the wrong man, according to Pasadena police.

The purported gangster plot was aimed at Charles L. Wright, wealthy Pasadena banker, but miscarried when the assailants attacked and were driven off by the cries of Wright's gardener, Thomas Virginis, who was mistaken in the darkness for Wright.

Virginis was badly beaten before Wright rushed to his rescue, causing the would-be kidnapers to flee in a large car.

3 GIRLS HURT, DRIVER HELD

Angelo Thomas, of 603 Third street, Versailles, is being held on a charge of reckless driving by Duquesne police today after an automobile, in which he was driving with three girl passengers, hit a curb and overturned at Liberty street and Duquesne avenue, Duquesne, late last night.

One of the girls, Julia Derkes, 17, of Versailles, was detained in the McKeesport Hospital with possible fractures of the ribs.

The other two, Katherine Bilinski, 18, of Versailles, and Rose Mallak, 16, of McKeesport, were treated for minor injuries.

County Ward Cases Await Grand Jury

Five morality cases, arising from the investigation into charges of abuses of Juvenile Court wards, will be considered by the county grand jury when it reconvenes for a one-day session next Monday. The defendants are Walter Dietz, Clair Corbett, John Burkhart, Anton Smerdal and Bernard Smerdal. About 100 other cases will be heard by the grand jury.

ACTION!

To meet the public's buying power, on January 3rd, 1933, this company reduced the price of its Bayuk Philadelphia Perfecto Cigar (Bayuk "Phillies") from 10c to 5c—and guaranteed it to be the same identical cigar as when it was America's largest-selling 10c brand.

Cigar dealers were not forgotten. In a few weeks, Bayuk distributed more than $140,000 to dealers as a protection against loss on cigars purchased by them to retail at 10 cents.

The response to this price reduction in Bayuk "Phillies" was immediate. Wherever introduced, it soon became—as it is today—the largest-selling cigar in its price class. We are proud of this success.

But even greater is our pride in what the success of this cigar has done toward the betterment of industry.

It enabled Bayuk to buy over $1,500,000 worth of tobacco from farmers who had little or no market for their crops.

It enabled Bayuk to increase its payroll by more than $1,000,000 annually.

It enabled Bayuk to continue—and to increase—the employment of thousands of salesmen on the payrolls of distributors and dealers.

Last—but not least—it enabled Bayuk to give—and continue to give—the men of America what they have decided is the best cigar value at any price.

This, to date, has been Bayuk's part in hastening recovery—and Bayuk intends to give even more aid. More tobacco will be bought from farmers. At least 900 more workers will be added to our payroll. Every continued cooperation will be extended in the nation-wide drive for recovery.

Incidentally, through this increased action—we expect the production of Bayuk "Phillies" to equal demand in a very few weeks. Happily there are good 5c cigars on the market which Bayuk "Phillies" smokers can purchase during this temporary shortage.

It goes without saying that this company whole-heartedly endorses the principles of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

C. P. A. TO GAIN BY RECOVERY

D. W. Springer, of Washington, secretary of the Amer[illegible]ociety of Certified Public Accountants, pointed out that the recovery act is of more [illegible]nificance to accountants than the income tax law.

He spoke befor[illegible] the luncheon of the Pittsburgh Chapter, Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants yesterday at the Keystone Club. E. S. Reno presided.

Discussing the federal security control bill, corporation and banking codes, Springer said that weekly statements, prepared by a certified or public accountant, would be required from many concerns. Fair play codes and price setting will also offer a wide field for accountants.

HOLD SCHOOLS FOR CANNERS

A schedule of canning demonstrations to be given in the Pittsburgh district under the auspices of the County Community Councils was announced today. Miss Lottie B. Hartt, home economics representative of Penn State College, will be in charge.

The first demonstrations were being held today in the Bridgeville American Legion Hall and at the Oakdale United Presbyterian Church.

The following demonstrations will be given:

ACT TO SETTLE CHACO WAR

Associated Press.

An agreement between Paraguay and Bolovia to place mediation of their dispute in the Gran Chaco border area in the hands of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, and Peru has been announced at the Brazilian chancelry.

The Asuncion government was said to have confirmed the plan, but the Bolivian minister of foreign affairs, while not denying the reports, said it was inopportune to divulge details.

League of Nations circles expressed surprise, for two members of a League commission appointed to handle the disputes are en route to South America.

Love Is Much More Important Than Riches in Marriage

How important is money in marriage?

Mama thinks it's very important, and shes' all of a fret because Mavis wants Tom, who hasn't any, when she could have Donald and travel in a limousine.

"What'll I do? she moans.

"How'll I make my little girl see what a terrible mistake she's making?"

What'll she do? I'll tell her my hunch. Then you take the job over. For maybe you've had —or maybe you are—a mother like that.

My Dear Miss Robinson:

Will you please try to help me with a very important problem involving my daughter? She needs to have some sensible person, not her mother, say a few words to her. She won't pay any attention to me. She thinks I don't know what I am talking about.

You see there are two men interested in her—seriously interested I mean. She has always had a great many beaux. Her name is Mavis. She is just 21, and really very beautiful. She could have almost any man she wanted. She has personality and charm. I have trained her carefully, so that she should have. I wanted her to have the best there is, and I have made every effort to give her the qualities that would enable her to get the best.

One young man—Donald, I will call him—belongs to a wealthy family. He has a good deal of money in his own right, left him by his grandfather. He has had all kinds of advantages —private school, university, travel in Europe, fine manners, friends among the most important people in the country—and he is mad about my little girl. He could give her everything a woman's heart could desire. He is not awfully handsome, it is true; but that is not important compared to the things he could give Mavis.

LAUGHS AT RICH MAN

But the difficulty is that there is another man—Tom. Now he is a very ordinary individual compared to Donald. He comes from just common people. He has no money except what he earns. He is a young attorney, having gone to night school. Of course, he is good looking, and Mavis says she is going to marry him.

I am almost distracted. I have talked and talked to her, trying to make her see that some day she will wish with all her heart that she had married Donald, who can give her so much. But she won't listen to me. When I speak of him, she laughs at him and actually calls him "stupid."

Please help me to make her see that there are more practical things to be thought of in marriage than "love."

MRS. P. F.

So you think marriage should be "practical!" You're right. It should. Marriage is a grim risk. We put all we have into it. We should get profitable returns out of it—rewards that have lasting value.

But just what returns have lasting value for a regular human being?

Automobiles? Diamonds? French frocks? Town and country houses? Rich food? They're all fine to have, my dear. Charming knick-knacks! But that's all they are—just knick-knacks. They have nothing to do with real life. They cannot, for one moment, satisfy the deep hungers.

LASTING VALUES

Companionship — partnership with someone who "talks your own language"—that's one of the "lasting values" that comes with the right marriage. And unless you can have that, nothing else counts.

Romance and adventure, hard work, gallant dreams, hardship and sacrifice—these are the things which bind two hearts together and bring lasting returns. When it comes to really enriching life, one little sorrow lovingly shared is worth a thousand automobiles.

And, as a matter of fact, you know all this as well as I do, lady. But you've gone soft and sour in your own life. You've forgotten your own young hunger for a brave, free life—or perhaps you never had the courage to see that hunger through. And so you are doing what so many cowardly, crabbed older people do. You're saying that "romance is all poppycock;" that money is all that counts.

And that sweet, spunky youngster of yours is laughing at you? Thank God for that! I hope she keeps on laughing—and marries the man of her heart. And here's hoping, too, that she laughs you out of your mean, withered ideas of life, into glorious new faith and courage!

A Buffet Lunch, A Great Dane Dog—But Let Fay King Tell It

By FAY KING

No one excels S. Jay Kaufman, famous New Yorker, as a host. His consideration and forethought for his guests are nothing less than genius.

For instance, he invited me to the buffet party that Maj. Bowes gave at the Hotel Warwick for Lee Sims and Ilomay Bailey, radio stars, who recently made their New York debut.

Now buffet tidbits are my weakness. Knowing this S. Jay insisted Lee and Illomay bring along the Great Dane dog.

It worked like a charm. The dog and I became buffet buddies. For once I ate my fill without embarrassment.

But how guilty I feel when I "listen in" to those delightful air artists.

Mary Tries to Forestall Noel's Repentance "Scene"

Mary whirled on me as I asked her what she was going to do, following her rush to the door as she made the astounding conjecture that Lillian had taken Noel into her own apartment "to try to fix things up."

"Do?" she queried. "What would any girl with self-respect do? Get out of here as fast as the law allows. Do you think I'm going to listen to any repentant swain saying, 'Mary, don't leave me,' after being incited to the plea by a kind-hearted dame who thinks she's doing me a favor? Oh, I know that sounds awfully snooty toward Lillian, and she, of course, thinks she's doing the best thing possible; but I'm not taking any charity, thank you."

"Mary, Mary!" I sighed. "What am I ever going to do with you? You haven't the slightest grounds for belief that Mrs. Underwood saw Noel at all after he left."

"Nay, nay, 'dolling.' She has Noel sewed up over there, and pretty soon she'll be sending him over here all primed with romantic speeches. Well, he can make 'em to her or to you. Me —I'm going to be 'conspicuous by my absence'."

"But," I tried a last ruse. "You told Noel to come back and look for hats with you. What shall I tell him?"

"Anything your fertile invention can think up," she said, with a saucy little moue at me. "You know a lot of words. But I'm going places and doing things. Don't expect me for dinner."

NOEL RETURNS

It was barely 10 minutes later that another knock sounded upon my door, and it needed no psychologist to deduce that the hand whose knuckles were sounding that irregular knocking was trembling violently. I was not surprised when at my raised voice calling "Come in," Noel Veritzen burst through the door as if it were the finish tape of a relay race.

"Where is Mary?" he demanded.

"I don't know," I said. "She left here about 10 minutes ago, saying she wouldn't be back for dinner."

"Which way did she go?" He plunged toward the door.

"I haven't the slightest idea," I said coolly. "You couldn't possibly find her after this interval, as I'm sure she took a taxi. Please come back here and sit down, Noel. I want to talk to you, and I can't come over to you."

Purposely I thus reminded him of my inability to walk; purposely played upon the innate chivalry which is his. Nothing else, I knew, would keep him from dashing wildly after Mary, no matter how futile he knew the pursuit would be.

"Oh, I am so sorry!" he said contritely, and crossing the room took the chair by my couch, which I had indicated.

"Will you believe me, dear boy, when I tell you that if there were the slightest chance of your finding Mary, I should send you after her post haste?"

READ STORY

His hot, fevered eyes held mine for an instant. Then his stiffness relaxed and he slumped against the cushions of the chair.

"Yes, I believe you; and I won't go after her until you think it best. But, oh, Mrs. Graham, I am so unhappy over her! Mrs. Underwood has just showed me that paper—about Paris—and Georges.

"Of course I see what my father is trying to do. He never has given up the idea of separating us. As long as I thought the year there was just for Mary's training, and—that—she wanted to go, I wanted to—smother my own feelings, and try to be glad—for her.

"But now Mrs. Underwood has shown me what actual peril there may be for Mary in being thrown into that circle around Georges. He is a king now, you know, and if—if he paid Mary the same attention there as he did over here that summer—if he fell in love with her again—I think he's always been in love with her—there might be unpleasant things said. And that must not be!"

His voice was raucous, unsteady. The last words came out almost in a shout.

Lillian had done her work well. Mary would go to Paris only after a battle royal with him. But it would be waged upon the premise that there would be danger of scandal for her in Paris, and I was afraid that he would keep unsaid, through pride, the one thing that would keep Mary at home.

"How do you know Mary wants to go?" I asked quietly.

Household Hints

If you are sewing on delicate white goods that you particularly want to keep clean, powder your hands occasionally with talcum powder. Then if your hands should perspire the powder will take up the moisture and you cannot spoil the dainty garment.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am writing you regarding the proper time to have an announcement party.

I received my engagement ring on Christmas and have worn it ever since. Although my engagement was never publicly known, all of my friends and acquaintances knew about it.

I am planning to be married soon. Several of my girl friends have been wanting to give me a shower and said they thought I should have my engagement party first. However, I am wondering whether or not it is too late to have the party. I thought perhaps the only time you have an announcement party was in the event no one knew of the engagement before hand and it was a surprise to everyone. T.

Since you have been wearing your engagement ring for so long a time and since, therefore, your friends know of your engagement, I agree with you that it would be unnecessary and a bit ridiculous for you to have an announcement party at this late date. The "announcing" has already been done. Now is the appropriate time for the shower that your girl friends are planning to give for you.

Danger in Appendicitis Increases With Delay

Despite the increased skill and ability of modern surgery, appendicitis continues to be a serious and often fatal disease. Some will say this is a pretty pessimistic statement, but reports from different hospitals throughout the country confirm it. Let us consider why this is so.

Even though surgical technique of today is far superior to that of 25 years ago, it is of no value to humanity unless advantage is taken of it. Miracles cannot be performed in surgery when the operation is delayed too long.

All physicians agree that when appendicitis is recognized and surgery resorted to immediately, danger is minimized. In these cases convalescense is rapid and complications are rarely encountered. Delay in operation of a diseased appendix is dangerous. It is especially dangerous since the appendix may rupture.

Appendicitis, as its name implies, is an inflammation of the appendix. The appendix is a small tail-like structure at the end of the "cecum," a part of the large intestine. The inflammation can be traced to different germs. The severity of the inflammation depends upon the type of germ.

When the appendix ruptures germs are liberated within the abdominal cavity. This leads to an inflammation of the peritoneum, or lining of the abdominal cavity. It is a serious complication of appendicitis and is called "peritonitis."

Too often the victim of appendicitis complains of pain and discomfort in the abdomen. He may ignore the pain and carelessly attribute it to some digestive disturbance. In spite of continued pain, a physician is not consulted. This is a mistake.

In many instances the inflammation is made worse by self-medication, by the taking of castor oil or other laxative, for example. When appendicitis is present it is dangerous to take a strong laxative. It irritates the inflamed appendix and may cause it to rupture.

Persistent pain in the abdomen accompanied by fever and vomiting warrants immediate medical attention. Avoid all cathartics, let me repeat. Of course, all pain in the abdomen does not mean appendicitis. Nevertheless, it is best to be on the safe side and consult your physician.

If an operation is advised do not delay. Delay is dangerous. Immediate operation for appendicitis is the safest and sanest procedure. Appendicitis requires prompt surgical attention, and delay of only a few hours may lead to a fatal outcome. I am confident that the number of fatalities resulting from appendicitis would be greatly decreased if all persons suffering from acute and severe abdominal pains would seek immediate medical advice.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Twin chins where one should be, torment many a femme. Best to catch 'em young when adipose cells are frail and unsuspecting. Begin the treatment with a brush. Bathe the face thoroughly, lather a flesh brush. Throw the head far back, place the brush on the collar bones, come upward with a firm stroke to the chin tip; be gentle with the descending stroke. Rinse with cold water and dry, patting with the towel, don't rub. Anoint the skin surface with a heavy cream, pick up the extra chin in tiny folds, roll between thumb and fingers to dissolve and crush the fat cells. Don't fail to follow along with an ironing with ice, else instead of two chins you'll have one that is saggy, which is almost as bad.

Keeping in curl the short ends of hair at the back of the head is a daily job, even if the permament has got in its clever work. One way is to get a narrow marcel brush, dip it in hot water and brush the curls over your finger. Another method, arrange in flat ringlets the night before, pin with a three-cornered piece of tissue paper, anchor securely with a pin. There are little gadgets one can buy that serve. They make sausage rolls which can be divided into individual curly-cues.

Tincture of green soap is recommended as a shampoo for extremely oily hair that is falling. Take two ounces of green soap, one ounce of alcohol, they will form a tincture. Begin with a rinsing, follow along with three alternating soapings and rinsings. While the hair is drying friction the scalp vigorously.

Contract Bridge -:-

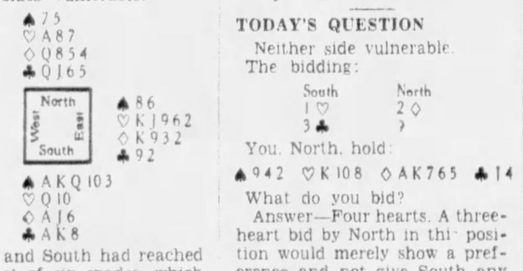
HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Foundation for a Squeeze

In the play of a great many hands at Contract Bridge, the choice is early presented to the Declarer whether he will play the hand on the basis of a simple finesse or a squeeze. Often, however, situations arise in which there is no finesse possible unless it is presented ready made by one of the opposing players—that is, unless one of the opponents leads the suit in question. Whether or not to accept such a finesse is a question which must be decided on the basis of knowledge of the distribution of the cards in the opposing hands, obtained from the bidding and play, and of mathematical probabilities. A hand in which the Declarer preferred to play for a squeeze rather than accept a ready-made finesse occurred in a recent Duplicate game at a club in New York, in which Mr. William J. Huske held the South hand below:

South Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



North and South had reached a contract of six spades, which was perhaps an overbid, although ordinarily this contract would be made without much difficulty. For lack of something better to do, West decided to open the fourth-best club. This was won by South with the Ace, and three rounds of spades disclosed that the Declarer must lose a trump trick. Anxious to shift the burden of the lead, South continued with a fourth round of spades, and West was in the lead for the second time during the play of the hand.

At this point West shifted to the heart suit. Now South could make the hand if the lead of the heart had been away from the King by simply playing low, and, if East did not play the King, winning the trick with the Queen, provided, of course, that the diamond finesse yet to be tried proved successful. South weighed the situation carefully and decided that the finesse would probably lose, but that if by chance East held both the King of diamonds and the King of hearts, a squeeze could be developed. The fact that West was marked with but five cards in the red suits made more probable the location of both of these key cards in the East hand, in which there were nine cards in diamonds and hearts.

The Ace of hearts was played from Dummy and the Declarer now led a small diamond and finessed the Knave. When this held, the last trump was laid down, as an essential step in the preparation of the squeeze. Then followed the remaining high club from the closed hand, after which a small club was led to Dummy. With the continuation of the club suit, East could no longer defend the hand. Hoping that his partner held the heart Queen, he discarded the heart King.

South, discarding after him on the last lead of clubs, dropped the low diamond and won the last 2 tricks with the Ace of diamonds and the Queen of hearts. The hand could, of course, never be made against an Opening lead of a heart, but West could scarcely be blamed for not making that choice, as his top card in hearts was so low that East would have difficulty in reading it as a top.

The contract should probably not have been reached, or, if reached, should have been played in notrump rather than spades, but the game being Duplicate, where honors assume an abnormal value, the final declaration was perhaps perfectly natural.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Neither side vulnerable.
The bidding:

South	North
1 ♡	2 ◇

You, North, hold:

♠ 9 4 2 ♡ K 10 8 ◇ A K 7 6 5 ♣ 1 4

What do you bid?

Answer—Four hearts. A three-heart bid by North in this position would merely show a preference and not give South any indication as to the additional strength to be found in the North hand. North on the first round of bidding correctly decides that his hand is not quite strong enough for a double Raise in hearts with only three trumps, and accordingly makes a compromise bid of two diamonds. After South has bid a second suit at the level of three, it looks probable that South has a five-card heart suit. In view of North's very good heart support, as well as a mild fit in clubs and over 2½ honor-tricks, game should be contracted for. A three-heart bid by North in this position would be a weakness bid and South would probably pass.

EVA LE GALLIENNE ON AIR -:- Famed Actress Reads Maeterlinck's 'Bluebird' -:- TONIGHT'S PROGRAMS

Whiteman, Thomas Here

Eva Le Gallienne's reading of Maeterlinck's "Bluebird" tonight at 7:15 marks a definite change in the trend of radio entertainment for children, prompted, no doubt, by the storm of parental protest against the spook and crime thrillers of last year. Other children's programs to be announced within the next few days indicate that gangster dramas for the youngsters are things of the past.

While Miss Le Gallienne's series over an NBC-KDKA network marks a high spot in children's programs, the ageless beauty of "The Bluebird," "The Snow Maiden," "Alice in Wonderland," and their interpretation by the noted actress will assure entertainment for adults as well.

Aircaster Dips Into Gossip of Radio Row

By AIRCASTER

It is interesting to note, on a tour of radio row—

That when expert surveyors tell you the American audience prefers cultural programs, you should remember Jimmy Melton's experience. He canvassed a dozen friends and they all expressed preferences for radio lectures, opera, symphonies and smart dramatics, but when he called on them again, he found each listening to dance bands.

That complying with requests for photographs keeps many radio artists broke.

Radio for Baby

That Bunny Coughlin, of the Funnyboners, has a radio on his youngster's baby carriage so that he doesn't miss anything while perambulating.

That two famous radio artists, now married to each other, were formerly married to two other people, and that the two others, figuring that artists should be married to each other, gave them up—and then got married themselves, and even now, the non-artist wife writes letters to the other gal, telling her how to cook for the artist hubby.

Lombardo Ill

For the first time since its organization, the Lombardo Orchestra is carrying only three brothers, Guy, Carmen and Victor. Liebert, the fourth, is recuperating from a siege of pneumonia—and, of all things, is growing a Balbo beard.

* * *

The official opening of Radio City has been slated for November 15—the same date on which the National Broadcasting Company was organized in 1926.

The basic purpose behind the North American radio conference, now in its fourth week at Mexico City, is the agreement on the manner of allocating a limited number of wavelengths equably among the United States, Canada, Central America, with Mexico as the pivotal and most insistent party to the conference.

Word filtering back from the federal commission's technical experts, and those sent to the conference as observers by the networks, carries some discouragement for American listeners, because it portends a terrific shakeup in frequencies in which America will be forced to relinquish a number of precious channels.

Junior Patrol Gets Exciting News

Big excitement on the Junior Patrol program this afternoon! Snuggins, Spike, Perce and Bill, on their cruise down the Ohio, get a telegram from Quin Hall, calling them back to Pittsburgh for a very special reason! Better listen!

Seven small boys and girls appear on the program with songs, dances and saxophone solos.

Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, flashes the news over WCAE-WJAS at 9:05 a. m., and 12:15, 2:15 and 6:30 p. m.

Globe-Trotting

—By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN—

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Many compliments have been received for the broadcasting companies, who covered the arrival of the famous fliers.

M. F. McGrew wants to commend particularly the Mollison broadcast from Bridgeport. Other listeners are somewhat disappointed in the airing of these events because the announcer often repeats and indulges in "ohs" and "ahs" without saying anything.

The announcer at the field is not the same as the reporter. He cannot tell you what all is taking place. All he can give are his reactions, or what he sees. Of course, several announcers are stationed at different places to get a fuller picture.

You can't make plans for this sort of a broadcast because there are too many angles that may crop up. The fliers may not bring their planes down near the relator or if they do, the crowd may make it impossible for him to get settled or a last minute change may cause an hour's delay.

What the announcer really does is to transport you to the field. By telling what happens to him, what he sees, and what he thinks, he is placing the listener in his shoes.

You are hearing about the things you could see if you were there, and many times those at the scene do not get a chance to see very much. They do share in the excitement, in the crush, in the breathless suspense, all of which seem ably conveyed over the microphone.

When he stalls for time and repeats, then if you were there, you would have to do the same stalling and be looking at the same scenes over and over again, just waiting for something to happen.

The duty of actually reporting the news comes within the field of the reporter, who impersonally and without the necessity of writing his impressions immediately can co-ordinate his facts and present the actual news for his newspaper or for later dissemination over the air.

'Eye of Dragon' On WFBG

The radio drama of love, piracy and terror in the tornado-torn China Sea is an American Weekly presentation.

French, Cuyler On Seals' Bill

The Trained Seals offer a choice morsel for the baseball fans via WCAE tonight at 7 when Charles J. (Chilly) Doyle, Sun-Telegraph baseball writer, interviews Larry French, Pirates' star southpaw pitcher, and Hazen (Kiki) Cuyler, Cub outfielder.

East Deer Township Heat Victim Dies

World's worst job ended by KLEENEX

Illustration and text copr. 1933, Kleenex Co.

MADAM, if you like to wash dirty handkerchiefs, don't read this advertisement. We are going to tell you how to get rid of this disagreeable job. We are going to tell you about Kleenex, a handkerchief to use and destroy.

Softest yet strongest

This disposable handkerchief, Kleenex, is made of the softest, yet strongest of tissues. It is many times more absorbent than cotton or linen, is always gentle and soothing. Kleenex is destroyed instantly after using.

The price of a big, generous package of Kleenex is about that of one inexpensive handkerchief. Thus the use of Kleenex is a real economy. Since the cost is so low, you need use each tissue but once. This means no self-infection from soiled handkerchiefs. No storing damp handkerchiefs in laundry bags, to scatter germs through clothing.

Kleenex is kept clean, hygienic, even during use, by the patented, self-dispensing, pull-out box. Your hand never enters the box to contaminate or mess up the other sheets. You never take out more than the required amount—an assurance of economy!

Large size Kleenex is especially recommended for use with cosmetics. Three times usual size, it is also convenient for guest towels, dusting, etc.

Kleenex, in both sizes and in rolls, is sold at all drug, dry goods and department stores.

That Mary Churchill Mellon, grandniece of James Ross Mellon, Andrew W. Mellon and Richard Beatty Mellon, will be a debutante in the fall, I mentioned yesterday. She's the older daughter of the Edward Purcell Mellons, of New York and Southampton.

They will present their daughter at a small dinner-dance Thanksgiving night—November 30—in the Hotel Pierre, New York. They are also planning to give a tea in their Fifth avenue (New York) home for her.

Mrs. Philip Hodill and her two daughters are the guests of Mrs. Hodill's mother, Mrs. W. H. Hadley, at her summer home in Chautauqua, New York.

* * *

Marcella Comes, the young artist, will be her sister's maid of honor and only attendant at the wedding, August 7, of Alice Comes, daughter of Mrs. John T. Comes, of the Pennsylvania Apartments, and Everett Michael Cloran, son of the Michael J. Clorans, of Boston, Mass.

Sister's Attendant

Gordon Cloran, of Providence, R. I., will be his brother's best man. There'll be no ushers.

Harriet Stewart will give a dinner party in her home for Alice, and the Saturday before the wedding, Callista Schill will entertain with a bridge-tea in her home in the Schenley Apartments for the bride-elect.

Among our fall brides will be Nancy Curtis Bowman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Bowman, of Oakmont, who has named September 9 as the date for her marriage to Dr. Crawford Brown, of Rochester, N. Y., son of Mrs. Lewis Day Brown, of Pittsburgh.

To Wed In Fall

The scene of the wedding will be Riverby, the summer home of the Bowman family on the Allegheny River in Forest County.

Miss Doucette Married in Cathedral

Miss Adrienne Doucette, daughter of A. A. Doucette, manager of the Pittsburgh Golf Club, and Mrs. Doucette, became the bride of Warren L. Kreuger this morning at 11 o'clock in St. Paul's Cathedral with the Rev. Vincent Burke officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a princess-style gown of heavy white chiffon having a matching jacket with three-quarter length sleeves pleated into the shoulders, and a large fine white straw hat, trimmed with pleated white grosgrain ribbon. She carried white roses, lilies of the valley and jasmine.

Her only attendant, her sister, Miss Frances Doucette, wore a deep hyacinth-blue organza dress with a hat and gloves to match, and carried Talisman roses and yellow gradioli. Robert A. Kreuger, of New York, was his brother's best man.

The church was decorated with cibotium ferns, urns of white gladioli and other white garden flowers.

A reception and a wedding breakfast for members of the two families and close friends followed in the Pittsburgh Field Club.

Bridge Tea Given For Bride-Elect Of July 31

Mrs. Arthur W. Grabe, the former Miss Selma Pettey, entertained Saturday in the home of her mother, Mrs. William E. Pettey, of Perrysville avenue, in honor of her sister-in-law, Miss Lillian Grabe, who will marry Harry Peterson July 31.

Bridge was played on the lawn. At the tea, Mrs. William K. Miller poured.

The tea table was decorated with pink tea roses and lighted with green and yellow tapers. The smaller tables were similarly decorated with miniature bridesmaids as favors.

Gossipy Chat

By NANCY JANE

Lying on her tummy on the crowded sidewalk of Soho's Fifth avenue the other day was a young girl in a green bathing suit, acquiring a sun-tanned back.

She was as unconcerned as any of her more fortunate sisters sunning in the privacy of the Little Sewickley Creek Swimming Pool or the Pittsburgh Field Club.

A Pittsburgh girl will be married in what was once a little red schoolhouse. She's Jane Graybill Foust, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Luther Raymond Foust, who'll marry Robert Nicholas Ford, son of the Samuel Fords, of Swissvale, late this summer at her parents summer home, Deer Creek Cottage, Cheswick.

The cottage was originally a quaint old school-house, to which the Fousts have added rooms. Their summer home is located in an enchanting spot in the loop of the Big Deer Creek.

Young swimmers in Sewickley are busy this week perfecting their stroke and their form for the swimming competition to be held soon at the Little Sewickley Creek Swimming pool. The competition a year ago attracted ever so many proud mothers and fathers.

A group of sub-debs who asked Lenore Kight, the young swimming champion from the Homestead Library Club, all sorts of questions after her recent exhibition in Sewickley, are now mentioning casually that they've talked to this young girl who has since then added fresh honors to her name.

On this occasion the bureau will sponsor an evening of entertainment for the Civilian Conservation Corps in the reforestation camp in North Park.

Radio Station WWSW has furnished the program, which will be given by the Red Star Aces, the Ryan Sisters, Val Barr, a blues singer, with June Marshall accompanying; little Evelyn Ruth, acrobatic dancer; Ed Sprague, vocalist, and Bobby Simms' Orchestra.

Mrs. Israel Oseroff heads the recreation bureau, with Mrs. Edward Lencher as vice chairman and Mrs. Mitchell De Groot assisting.

Mrs. Charles Roades, who, although a member of the Los Angeles Circle, is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Harold Carter, in Crafton avenue.

Mrs. H. G. Crago and Miss Mary Sayres were delegates from Waynesburg; Mrs. W. M. Alexander, from Monongahela, and Miss Bell Patton, Munhall. In the receiving line was Miss Ella G. Stephenson, the Chautauqua Alumni Association's first vice president and a former Pittsburgher.

Woman's Literary Club Members on Vacation

Many members of the Woman's Literary Club of Bellevue are away from home at present. Mrs. John Bragdon is making several visits to Chautauqua, returning to Bellevue now and then. Mrs. Chester F. Johnston, a former president, is with Mr. Johnston at the Century of Progress Exposition. Mrs. Joseph Caughey is another Chautauqua devotee.

Dinner to Be Held In Indoor 'Garden' At College Club

The College Club's dinner tonight will not be held outdoors as scheduled. Instead, the big club room is being decorated to represent a garden and there the tables will be set with a space in the center for dancing. Mrs. S. Brainard West will give her dance program on the little dais at one end of the room. Reservations have been made for 80 guests.

Mrs. H. B. Gardner gave the book review at yesterday's meeting of the new members and Miss Elizabeth Chesterman was hostess.

NEW EVENING SILHOUETTE IS TUBULAR AND STRAIGHT

THIS TIME of the year is intense and soul-stirring because the air tingles with fascinating fashion messages. The excitement concerns the coming evening silhouettes from which a new figure is emerging. It is swathed, sheath-like and straight. It has few, if any, of the trapping, ruffles, frills and ruchings we're seeing around us now—designers are changing all that. They're going to make us into tall, pillar-like ladies whether we want to change from frills or not. And many of us do.

AS FAR AS we can make out at the moment, the evening colors to watch for will be browns, with taupe-brown the most important of all; deep pink (rose quartz it is called), greyish pastels, many, many shades of gray with brownish, bluish and purplish casts, as well as the perennial black and white, which still predominates over all.

* * *

THE FABRICS: Crinkly velvets, shiny silks, satins, taffetas and chiffons, this last fabric an important summer one ordained to carry over into fall.

EVEN THOUGH there is to be so much change, it will be a gradual one. The newest evening gowns in the shops already show developments toward the new silhouette, but modified, to prepare us for what follows. The gowns are slim, though not entirely tubular. They concentrate their interest on the hem line, emphasize the shoulders—but lose interest between the two! Many of them have slight trains, sort of peacock insertions in back. However in general, they are not so extremely different from the summer things we've been buying. The drastic change will follow.

BECAUSE BLACK and white chiffon will continue to be good for some while, we've chosen one black and one white chiffon evening gown to illustrate these points. As you may see by glancing at the illustrations, each dress has something new about it, whether it be the slim skirts, tiny trains, interesting hem lines, or the shoulders.

* * *

IF YOU would be overwhelmingly smart, unpack your feather boas from their 1900 or 1932 wrappings and wear them with these dresses. You'll see all sorts of feathery decorations and capes and trimmings this fall on everything from hats to hems. Just a little of the Mae West influence to help make our lives a bit more colorful than they already are!

AIR HONEYMOON THWARTED

BOSTON, Mass., July 26.—(Universal.)—Beaten back by bad weather on the first leg of their aerial honeymoon, Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring and his bride, the former Helen Coolidge, who were married in Fitchburg yesterday, returned to Boston in a blind flight last night and journeyed to New York by train.

The Woodrings had reached New London, Conn., in an Army transport plane before they were forced to do an about-face. At one time a low ceiling forced them down to 300 feet and then their pilot, Lieut. C. W. Cousland, mounted to 3,500 feet and flew blind.

Near New London they were informed of poor flying conditions about New York and were ordered back to Boston.

Italian night as arranged by Victor Saudek for the Schenley lawn concert last night drew a large audience and much applause so that the whole district rang with Neapolitan and Venetian street songs.

Mr. Lissfelt

After many years we heard again the lovely intermezzi from Wolf-Ferrari's "Jewels of the Madonna" and opera which we used to hear frequently when the old San Carlo troupe came to this town.

Gertrude Blenko, coloratura soprano, and Joseph Esposito, pianist, were soloists of the occasion and both were received with acclaim.

Since last hearing of Miss Blenko there is decided improvement in her singing. The voice is a very pleasing organ though not large, and her musical abilities are broad, for in such songs as the vapid "Lo! Hear the Gentle Lark!" one can soon lose interest unless the singer is endowed with more than voice. As encore Miss Blenko gave the popular "Giannina Mia." Fiedler played the flute obligato to the Bishop air.

Esposito is a pianist with very sensitive tone. He is not a type who assails the gallery, but wins his laurels by finesse and consideration for each tone and its relation to the unit of the work which he plays. As encores he gave Liszt's etude "Un Sospiro" and the "Eroique" etude of Leschetizky.

IN THE STUDIOS -:- Stories About Artists Of Movie Capital -:- ON THE SCREEN

Marlene Gets Catherine Story

HOLLYWOOD, July 26.—No matter if she does admire Marlene Dietrich as an actress, Mae West is due to suffer a pang of envy when she hears about the German star's first picture upon her return to Paramount.

For La Dietrich is to play Catherine the Great of Russia," the one character in all history that our Mae most desires to bring to the screen.

Miss Dietrich

The story now being prepared by Manuel Komroff, he who wrote "Coronet" and "Two Thieves," will touch but lightly upon the military and civil exploits of the famous Empress.

It is to concentrate upon her many men, ranging from princes to young officers of her guard.

If you can believe Bernard Krieselman, Will Rogers' home town, Claremore, Okla., is a hotbed of philosophers. The leading restaurant sports the following framed legend:

"Let the other fellow do the worrying and you will live to take his widow to the movies."

And I like that Hollywood theater marquee which blazed out in electric lights:

"Mae West and free electric refrigerators."

Maureen O'Sullivan and John Farrow will be married soon, they'll tell you, if the church will give its permission. He was wed before.

Miss O'Sullivan

Even the diehards are admitting now that there was nothing to the reported romance between Sally Blane and the young Earl of Warwick. Letters from London say that his marriage to Rose Bingham will take place within the next two months.

Doctors order Sylvia Sidney to remain in the hospital for two more weeks. Meanwhile, they're shooting the French version of the Chevalier picture. Incidentally, Chevalier denies that money had anything to do with his leaving Paramount. He insists that his motives are purely artistic. No more long term contracts because he wants to chose each story.

R-K-O is congratulating itself on signing Raoul Roulien for "Flying Down to Rio." The Brazilian actor has persuaded his government to allow the studio to photograph the army, the navy, the marines, a gunboat and official palaces.

Jobyna Ralston is separated from her baby for the first time since its birth. She went to Oregon on location with Dick Arlen . . . Interested onlookers at the first showing of Buster Crabbe's Tarzan serial were Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller . . . Camera aces grinned from ear to ear the other day at Paramount when Bobbe Ernst agreed to pose with Buster Crabbe.

Miss Ralston

Jeannette MacDonald is off the high seas. She'll report immediately to M. G. M., where, in all likelihood, she'll play opposite Maurice Chevalier in "The Merry Widow" . . . When the movies show a violinist playing some old song, they have to pay the composer $100 royalty. When an actor sings it, the price is $150.

JEAN HARLOW TAKES DANCING LESSONS AMONG HER OTHER DAILY ROUTINES

Gossip About Plays and Players—By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Theodore Viehman, formerly of Tech, is back in town to direct the production of "Good-Bye Again," the next presentation of the Summer Playhouse to be given the week of August 7 in Shadyside Academy Theater, Fox Chapel. It is already in rehearsal.

* * *

The Winter Garden, New York, for many years the source of gorgeous girl and gayety shows, will be a home of happiness again (it is hoped) come September. For some time it has been a movie house and its rededication to musical comedy will come with the staging of Joe Cook's new show, "Hunky Dory," now in rehearsal. The cast will include Joe's stooge of many years' standing, Dave Chasen, Ona Munson, Harriet Hoctor, Frances Upton, Inez Courtney and, of course, some men.

While there is not a single, solitary new show opening on Broadway these days, the summer theaters of the East, from Bar Harbor, Me., to Abingdon, in the far interior of Virginia have become production centers. Lenore Ulric is trying out a new one, "East of the Sun," in Jackson Heights, Queens, a division of Greater New York on Long Island. It is by Bosley Crowther and William DuBois. Among the 15 new dramatic productions that will have been presented on the summer stage ere the week ends are two by veteran playwrights, "Home James," by A. E. Thomas, and "I Am Laughing," by Edwin Justus Mayer. Formerly most of these plays likely would have had summer tryouts on Broadway, but things being as they are managers find it more economical to make their experiments elsewhere. If any number of them are promising there will be plenty of time for New York to look at them later.

The movie about the late Florenz Ziegfeld, noted producer of the "Follies" and other musical productions, now bears the title "The Great Ziegfeld." It will be musical, from a script prepared by Billie Burke (Mrs. Ziegfeld) and William Anthony McGuire.

Among the five stage attractions current in New York is a revival, "Dangerous Corner," mystery play by J. B. Priestley . . . Raquel Torres, Mexican actress, has the feminine lead in "Duck Soup," Marx Brothers new screen comedy, now in production . . . Russell Janney, producer of "The Vagabond King," announces that he will produce a musical version of a play by Justin Huntley McCarthy, whose "If I Were King" was the basis of "The Vagabond King" . . . Ann Harding, who shares stellar honors with William Powell in "Double Harness," is the daughter of the late Gen. George Grant Gately, and changed her name because her father did not at first approve of her choice of profession . . . "The House of Connelly," Theater Guild play, has been purchased as a screen starring vehicle for Janet Gaynor, who is about to begin a vacation of six weeks, that will include visits to Chicago and New York . . . When "The Merry Widow" gets to the point of another filming, this time by M-G-M, it will have a revised and augmented score by Franz Lehar, its composer.

President's Radio Appeal In Metrotone News

Highlights of President Roosevelt's stirring radio appeal to the nation for unified action to spur recovery, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. To the Oval Room of the White House, scene of other epochal talks, the President summoned the newsreel cameramen, and permitted the picture to be made as he talked.

Aviation, its heroes and a heroine, take the limelight in thrilling pictures which show Wiley Post completing his 'round-the-world flight in seven days; the crack-up of Jim and Amy Mollison in a Connecticut swamp, and the reception tendered Gen. Balbo and his officers and crew by the City of New York. Although Post arrived in the middle of the night, the pictures show the enormous crowd waiting and uniting in a great demonstration. An animated map and a graphic description by the Globe Trotter, give every detail of this greatest of all flights.

Exclusive pictures show the wreck of the luxurious passenger steamship Nicolas Paquet on a reef in the Straits of Gibraltar. All aboard were saved.

Cantor Family Moves East

After three years in Hollywood, the Eddie Cantor family seat is again being moved to New York, with the departure of Mrs. Cantor and the five Cantor girls aboard the S. S. Virginia. The Cantors celebrated their nineteenth wedding anniversary a few days previously.

Eddie will remain in Hollywood for it will be two months before he leaves to rejoin his family in New York. In the East, he expects to resume his literary, radio and stage activities.

After three years in which he steadfastly denounced recurrent rumors that he was considering a return to the stage, Eddie now acknowledges that he is quite willing to take a fling at a Broadway stage part, provided it offers some possibility of being translated to the screen later.

The Greater Tragedy

JOHN DUFF sneezed, and then smiled. He smiled because, for the first time in his life, he didn't numble, "God Bless You." Those words wouldn't be necessary any more now. Superfluous, he thought, like taking Gen. Balbo on a roller coaster for the thrill of the thing.

John Duff was about to die. He was in the very best of health. But death would come in the form of murder. He would be killed within the next half hour by John Duff. Another John Duff. A man who looked and acted like him, but who seemed to be dragging him to the brink of eternity against his will.

Suicide . . . . . .

He got up from his rolltop desk, surveyed the empty desks all around, and walked over to the window. Below, far below, lay one of the streets of New York. It looked like a black river, at the bottom of the Grand Canyon.

John Duff didn't shudder as he looked. He strained his myopic eyes to see the swarms of people crawling along both sides of the street. Those people, he thought, are alive. They are crawling, working, slaving, sweating, living, laughing and loving—for what?

There was no answer. When you come right down to it, he figured, there really isn't an answer to anything. You go through life having a little fun and a whole lot of heartaches, and then — pouf! — you stop breathing and your enemies tell the world what a swell guy you really were.

For a moment, John Duff felt impelled to raise the window and jump. But he didn't. The window was only 22 floors above the street. The roof was 40. No use taking any chances, you know. Might as well do it right.

John Duff went back to his desk. From the center drawer, he removed a small mirror. He looked in it, and gazed at his face for the last time.

The face he saw was old, and lined. The eyes were still young, and very blue. The hair still retained its natural brown, but there wasn't much left of it. As he looked, he smiled again, for he recalled how much he had feared baldness. So much so, that he had allowed a few strands of hair to grow exceptionally long, so that he could comb them over the bald parts.

All that seemed silly now. Trivial. He hurled the mirror on to the floor. It cracked from the center outward, like a star.

He grabbed a pen. Might as well write a last note. Every suicide does that. Why should I upset such a grand precedent he thought. It's a tradition! I can see the cops pouring into this office after it's all over, upsetting all my correspondence looking for a motive. And after it's all over, they'll say: "Why, the whole thing was a flop. He left no note!" . . .

Tired with thinking, John Duff looked for a sheet of paper. As usual, he couldn't find any in his desk drawers. He picked up a letter from the top of the desk. He looked at the signature. Leonard Lyons. Who was Leonard Lyons? He couldn't recall.

It made no difference. He turned the letter over to the blank side, and began to write.

"All my life," he wrote, "I was a tightwad. I saved and saved and saved. That's all I lived for. Money. When I made enough to retire on, I wanted more. And when that came along, I still wasn't satisfied.

"Six months ago, the bubble exploded. Not quickly, like most bubbles. Slowly. Securities, my main investment, declined until they were worth next to nothing. Real estate, which I tried to dispose of to save my security holdings, proved a white elephant. Yesterday, the bank in which I deposited my cash failed. Thus the motive.

"Now, I, John Duff, am about to leave this office, go to the roof and jump off. And, without any intended lack of reverence, I hope to God that I break every bone in my body!"

John Duff signed his name with a flourish. Then, with an ordinary paper clip, he stuck the note on to the desk lamp so that no one would have trouble finding it.

Then he stood up, took a last look at the office he knew so well, and walked out. He didn't tremble. His carriage was straight and firm. He closed the door without looking back, and walked down the corridor to the elevators.

John Duff pressed the elevator button. He stood looking at the concrete floor while waiting. After a few moments, he heard a small bell ring, and a light lit over the second elevator door. The door opened.

"Up?" queried John Duff.

"Up," replied the elevator boy.

The door closed noiselessly . . .

The porter picked his nose while looking out of the window. Then he pushed the brush across the floor again. He liked being a porter. They wanted to make him a window washer, but he told them he couldn't stand height. So they gave him a brush and two dollars less per week.

He didn't see the note until he had almost finished his work. The humming electric fan caused it to sway from the desk lamp. Curiosity caused him to read it.

The porter read slowly. When he reached the end his face turned a milky white. The brush dropped to the floor. The note fluttered down from his hand. Suddenly he ran. Ran skidding across the polished floor and out into the hall. He pushed the "up" button. The elevator took years coming.

The elevator boy could hardly understand him.

"Yes, yes," he said. "I took John Duff up about 10 minutes ago. Sure I remember. He said the office was too hot. He wanted some air. What? Suicide? John Duff? Good Lord!"

The elevator sped to the 39th floor. The porter dashed out.

As he reached the top, he almost fainted. For there, lying right in front of him, was John Duff. The face was contorted with pain. Quickly the porter noticed that the man was still breathing. He buckled down on his knees and started rubbing Duff's wrists.

John Duff moaned.

The porter continued to rub his wrists.

"What happened, Mr. Duff? How did it happen?"

The suicide stopped moaning.

"What happened?" he repeated. "What happened? Why I was coming up that ladder, and fell over the top rung and sprained my ankle. For God's sake, man, will you get a doctor? This may be serious!" . . .

U. S. DROPS SUIT OVER REDBIRD

EVANSVILLE, Ind., July 26.—(AP.)—Foster Lewis' redbird was back home today, and Deputy United States Game Warden Edward Aleon had a final word for the man he charged violated the migratory bird treaty act.

The officer, returning the bird he seized 10 days ago, delivered the following note:

"You are hereby advised that the department has issued instructions you may have your redbird if you so desire.

"The above does not mean you will escape prosecution for possession of a wild bird under the acts of the state of Indiana; therefore, your acts in the matter will be governed accordingly."

County Prosecutor Winfield K. Denton indicated he was not concerned about prosecuting Lewis.

Lewis said he found the bird three years ago with a broken wing and nursed it to health. Since then it has refused to leave the vicinity of his home. Aleon acted after hearing of the case.

On arraignment before a commissioner, Lewis pleaded guilty and was placed under $250 bond, but United tSates District Attorney Val Nolan indicated the case will not be pressed.

JOB CAMPAIGN SUCCESS, SAYS ROOSEVELT

turn the matter over to the District Attorney.

He said a check would be made to avoid merchandisers' capitalizing on the sale of the "badges of honor."

The "NRA" insignia was designed to be used by firms which have signed agreements to increase wages and curtail working hours, thereby helping employment.

Since these agreements have not gone out yet to the employers, the badge cannot be worn by anyone and it was said that after August 1 the distribution would be carefully regulated.

The wool textile code was being whipped into shape today for presentation to President Roosevelt within a few hours if possible.

Johnson and representatives of his advisory boards received the report of Arthur D. Whiteside, the deputy administrator who handled the hearing, and expected to give approval soon.

It was understood that the report would propose a minimum wage of $16 for the industry instead of the $14 proposed in the code and $18 sought by labor.

JOB INCREASE SLOWING

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP.)—A slowing up of employment gains in July was reported last night by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, on the basis of preliminary trade union figures.

Green said:

"Union employment figures for July come as a warning that business has not been quick enough to reorganize itself under the recovery program.

"The President's general code comes just in time. If we allow the return of men to work to be slackened off, the whole program is doomed."

The trade union reports showed that the percentage of membership returning to jobs so far this month is 0.7, as compared with 1.3 in June.

51,000 Regain Jobs At Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—(INS.)—Fifty-one thousand persons returned to work in Philadelphia between March 15 and June 15, a report of the industrial research department of the University of Pennsylvania showed today.

The unemployment decrease between May 15 and June 15 was 20,500. It was the first time since the beginning of the depression that continued decreases in unemployment were recorded for a quarter of a year.

Labor Lauds Ban On Steel, Coal Company Unions

cluded in a code without any modification.

"The law gives the administration no discretion as to this."

His utterance on modification of the labor terms was deemed highly significant in view of the steel industry's action in providing for company unions in its code. These are organizations within each plant, with the final appeal for any dispute resting in the owner or manager.

The issue has arisen also in the lumber industry, and the understanding has been that the automobile manufacturers and the coal operators would ask the same provisions, to prevent outside unionization of their forces.

UNION STAND

Louis Leonard, international secretary of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of North America, said his organization was going to "stick four-square behind the thousands of men who are designating this association as their representative."

It's strictly in accord with the President's remarks last Monday night over the radio, he said. He declared the recovery act was "clear" as regards company unions.

Leonard said he is going to Washington tomorrow to attend the hearing on the steel industry's code. At that time he will present the association's own code to the National Recovery Administration.

The "big steel companies," according to Leonard, have continued to fight for the striking out of the clause in the recovery act giving workers the right to choose their own representatives. He continued:

"We are fighting company unions to the finish and will ask for a six-hour day, five-day week and a wage scale based on a general agreement we now have in force with the Western Sheet and Tin Plate Manufacturers' Association."

COMPANIES SILENT

Officials of leading coal and steel companies generally were unwilling to comment on the sudden turn of federal authorities in opposition to their attempts to prevent control of their workers by national labor unions.

R. Templeton Smith, vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, said that he did not care to comment on Richberg's stand. J. D. A. Morrow, president of the company, is not in town.

The president of a leading independent steel company who insisted that his name be withheld, declared that the steel code as now drawn is in full conformity with the Industrial Recovery Act.

He stated that provisions of the code in regard to representation of workers are generally misunderstood. The code provides for full representation in accordance with the law. It then recounts several principles and policies of the steel industry but these are not binding on workers and will not restrict their rights under the law.

BUSINESS MEN PLEDGE AID TO RECOVERY

Union in President Roosevelt's recovery program was pledged by Pittsburgh business and civic leaders today at a meeting of the committee formed to put the national drive in motion here.

The 500 committee members packed the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce auditorium. They heard former Gov. John S. Fisher, president of the chamber, say:

"As good citizens, we all are ready to lay aside differences of opinion to unite in this recovery program outlined by Gen. Johnson."

HERRON'S VIEWS

Mayor John S. Herron, honorary chairman of the recovery committee, said:

"There are still 65,000 families in Allegheny County receiving aid from welfare. What we need now is the united effort of everybody to put thousands back to work. There is no question but that things are getting better."

Twenty-six Pittsburgh firms and 59 others in Western Pennsylvania, meanwhile, were eligible for the President's honor roll.

WIDE RESPONSE

The Pittsburgh district concerns to respond immediately to Mr. Roosevelt's plea for co-operation in agreeing to a blanket code included all phases of commercial life, ranging from the beauty shop to steel mills. In between were the names of department stores, dairy companies, poultry stores, construction companies and machine shops.

Business meanwhile continued to climb onto firmer ground in the Pittsburgh territory, lifting employment with it. All men who became engineers in 1925 on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad are now at work, many with regular runs, according to an Associated Press dispatch from New Castle.

STATEWIDE SUPPORT

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—(AP.)—Pledges of support for the national recovery program are pouring in from all parts of Pennsylvania in a constantly increasing tide.

More than 300 business establishments represented at a meeting in Wilkes-Barre last night voted to start Monday with the re-employment and wage-advancing program. The minimum wage for store workers will be $14 for a 40-hour week.

Reading's Chamber of Commerce announced that 400 Berks County merchants have pledged themselves to support the National Industrial Recovery Act.

Indiana proudly telegraphed President Roosevelt that every merchant and manufacturer in the borough had accepted his blanket code.

Eighty-one Boyertown merchants also telegraphed the White House that the businessmen in their community are unanimously in favor of the recovery program.

From Scranton two wholesale tobacco companies, the Scranton Commercial Association and the Scranton Clearing House Association telegraphed word of their support to Washington.

Trees Named To Federal Work Board

Appointment of J. C. Trees as a member of the Pennsylvania advisory board on public works was announced today in a telegram from President Roosevelt to Mr. Trees.

The message to Trees read:

"I have appointed you a member of advisory committee of three in your state on public works organization."

Trees, partner of M. L. Benedum, Democratic leader and oil operator here, is expected to become chairman of the committee.

The group of three will advise Edward J. Flinn, who was named yesterday as administrator of the public works program in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, on public works projects in this state.

SET UP PUBLIC BUILDING FUND

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—A federal public building program costing $60,000,000 has been approved by the Budget Bureau as a part of the $3,300,000,000 public works program, members of Congress were informed today.

The projects include new post-offices and federal buildings in many larger cities. Proposed buildings in small cities, where the government can rent cheaper than build, have been stricken from the list.

Appointment of 10 regional public works advisers by President Roosevelt was to be followed by the naming of advisory committees of three for each state. Among the regional advisers are Edward J. Flynn, Secretary of State of New York and Democratic champion of President Roosevelt, headquarters New York, including New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Order Placed Here For Hangar Lights

An order for 24 explosion-proof floodlights to be used in lighting the airship hangar at the Sunnyvale (Cal.) Naval Air Base has been received by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. The Sunnyvale hangar will eventually house the U. S. S. Macon.

CODE WON'T VOID CONTRACTS

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP.)—The Recovery Administration, in applying the President's blanket voluntary agreement for all employers, does not intend to use pressure to change existing contracts between employers and workers.

Hugh S. Johnson, the administrator, was asked:

"What will you expect of an employer who has made an agreement with a union for a 48-hour week?"

Johnson replied:

"You cannot change a contract without the agreement of the other party to the contract, and you do not get out by making a second agreement, even with the government as the third party.

"If an employer agrees voluntarily to increase a wage above the contract with an organization, I do not suppose the organization will kick about that; but if it is the other case, he could not decrease the provisions of the contract without violating the agreement (with the President)."

He was asked:

"How about printers on newspapers who get more than the minimum? Are the owners under any obligation to raise the salaries above the contract agreement?"

Johnson answered:

"If the wages are more than the minimum, there is no obligation at all."

Another query was:

"Suppose the printers should go on a 40-hour week, would they be expected to receive the same amount as for 48 hours, if operating under a contract between union and employers?"

Johnson's reply was:

"A contract that they would be given employment for 48 hours a week and paid for 48 hours? I would rather not answer that off hand. It is a rather hard one. That is one of the questions that must be interpreted."

Councilmanic Contest Lacks Harmony

—By MARK SHIELDS—

The effort to eliminate from the City Council contest in the Republican primary the confusion which appears inevitable in the struggle for the mayoralty is not meeting with universal enthusiasm within the various factions.

Mr. Shields

Mayor Herron has his slate, consisting of the five members of Council whose terms expire this year. All seek renomination, and all were indorsed at the "town meeting" last week, though the organization leaders realized a stronger front could have been presented. They did not wish, however, to drop any one or more of the men who have been loyal in recent months, figuring that might be construed either as a betrayal of loyalty or a confession of weakness.

To oppose this slate there have been suggestions that five men be selected to be indorsed by the Herron rivals, whether they be one, two or three. If there was but one anti-administration candidate the proposition would be simple, but it seems there will be two at least in September, and there are three now.

Slates Would Aid Each Candidate

To get these three to agree on a councilmanic slate which might be attached to the tail of a trio of mayoralty kites is a task practically beyond accomplishment. It would be a minor operation in harmony, and so far the achievements in the harmony line among the anti-administration political factions have not been such as to cause any robust cheers.

Each mayoralty candidate would like to be supported by councilmanic candidates who have no other loyalty, and who as they go about the city will speak for the man on whose ticket they happen to be.

Manifestly, if there was one anti-administration councilmanic slate, and if Messrs. McArdle, Malone and Mackrell, or either two of them, should be mayoralty candidates when the campaign finally warms up, the councilmanic candidates could not lend a concerted help to any anti-administration entry for Mayor.

This is a by-product of the existing confusion which apparently has been overlooked, but it is of tremendous importance when there is under consideration a desire and an attempt to center opposition and to make the impending political battle a straight-out fight to a clear-cut decision.

League Expected To Offer Slate

The Citizens' League, it is assumed, having indorsed Councilman McArdle for Mayor, will in time give approval to a group of councilmanic candidates.

Following the withdrawal of the tentative candidacy of William P. Witherow last week, with the request that his friends support McArdle, the league yesterday gave its indorsement. The indorsement by the league, originally bent toward Witherow, followed a canvass of the membership.

The indorsement reads:

"The Citizens' League of Allegheny County indorses and pledges its support to the candidacy of P. J. McArdle for the nomination for Mayor in the primary election.

"Mr. McArdle's record during 22 years of service to the people of Pittsburgh, both as a public official in the City Council and as a private citizen fighting for the common good, demonstrates his fitness for the office he seeks.

Sees McArdle As Step to Reform

"The Citizens' League has been organized to develop the interest of all citizens in local government, in order to effect changes in city and county offices and administration which will bring them more nearly in accord with the will of the people. The basic principles of the league are honesty, efficiency and economy in government.

"Mr. McArdle's public life proves his adherence to these principles and his freedom from control by any factional or special group, and has given him an unusual experience in and a knowledge of the administration of the city's business.

"The Citizens' League gives to Mr. McArdle its support in the confident belief that his election is the initial but essential step in the reclamation of the government of this great city from the corrupt forces which now dominate it."

BANKS TO FIGHT COURT AWARD TO NESBITS

Appeal Follows Ruling To Pay Family $755,655

Following a decision by Judge James H. Gray directing that $755,655 of the life insurance trust of the late Harrison Nesbit be paid to his widow and children, an appeal was filed in the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

About 10 banks, creditors of Nesbit, had sought to obtain possession of the insurance trust, charging the banker had used it to defraud his creditors and that he was insolvent when the trust was made. Judge Gray in a previous opinion decided against this contention and found in favor of the widow and children.

EXCEPTIONS DISMISSED

Exceptions to the court's opinion were filed, all 97 of which were dismissed yesterday by Judge Gray. He directed that $755,655 be paid trustees of the fund, less $57,494, which Judge Gray ruled was due the Ohio National Bank of Columbus, plus the interest.

Attorney H. Fred Mercer, who represents the widow and children of Nesbit, said:

"Life insurance has always been exempt in Pennsylvania in proceedings of this kind. If the banks upset such a trust, no life insurance is safe."

EQUITIES LOST

Judge Gray sat for nearly three weeks, several months ago, listening to the testimony offered by the creditors. It was claimed that the failure of Nesbit's creditors to sell stocks, during the hectic stock market days of the latter part of 1929 and in 1930, wiped out all equities he had and piled up losses for those who had loaned him money.

However, it is understood that recent advances in the stock market have caused some of the securities to appreciate in value. Nesbit had borrowed around $1,000,000 on securities he purchased prior to the market crash.

FINE 'NUMBERS' SUSPECTS

They were Arthur Turk, 34, of the Wolfendale street address; Will Ellis, 38, of 935 Pawnee street, and Belle Barnett, 35, of 1443 Western avenue, all Negroes; and Mrs. Melba W. Grimpe, 21, of 454 North avenue, Millvale.

The men were fined $50 each and Mrs. Grimpe was fined $100.

BOGUS MONEY TRAPS PAIR

Daniel L. Miek, 26, of New Lebanon, and Rose Marie Pavlinka, 28, were held by the United States commissioner today, pending a hearing Friday on charges of passing counterfeit $10 notes. They were arrested yesterday in East End by city detectives.

Government men said today the couple had confessed passing 50 bills here since April. Miss Pavlinka, a former waitress here, and Niek lived at a Harvard street address, according to secret service men. They bought the fake notes in another city, agents said.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 26.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Coming from Frisco to Los Angeles with Roscoe Turner is no more of a trip than going from the observation car to the diner. I found a lot of good grass, feed and water, and I turned my Governors out for a few days to give their feet and voices a rest. I rushed down here to try and settle the movie strike before they get here, as all of 'em want to see the "gals" working.

Will Rogers

Here is the best one I have seen yet, a Hollywood film extra suing her husband for divorce, on the grounds that "her husband accused her of being the cause of all the depression." That will certainly be welcome news to Mr. Hoover to know there is somebody blamed for all the world's depression beside him.

Yours, WILL.

TWO ARRESTED ON SWINDLING CHARGE

Brothers Accuse Pair Of 'Promoting' Steam Auto

Arrested as they were about to receive $1,700, a partial payment in an alleged $6,000 swindle, detectives said, William Cunningham, 54, of 257 South Mathilda street, and Duncan McDonald, 51, of Garfield, O., faced a hearing in Central Police Court today on suspicious person charges.

The two were arrested by Detective John Dean on complaint of J. T. McClelland, 114 Third street, Aliquippa, and his brother, J. D. McClelland, proprietor of a restaurant at 4901 Penn avenue. The Aliquippa man claimed Cunningham had obtained $2,000 from him in 1929 for an interest in a glass making machine, according to detectives.

Six weeks ago, the sleuth said, Cunningham and McDonald approached the Pittsburgh McClelland offering to sell him an interest in a steam automobile. McClelland, they declared, called his brother and he attended one of the conferences. He recognized Cunningham, detectives said, but permitted his brother to conduct further negotiations.

Partial payment of the investment was to have been made last night and when the two men came to collect, they were arrested.

Detectives said they found a number of stock certificates in Cunningham's room.

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(AP.)—Lee D. Murphy, arrested in Pittsburgh recently and returned here on charges of murdering his wife, Nellie Buttles Murphy, at Long Beach, Cal., 17 days after they were married in November, 1926, was indicted yesterday by the county grand jury.

Man Drives Family To Street, Kills Self

HAZLETON, Pa., July 26.—(INS.)—After driving his wife and three children from their home into the street early today, Samuel Klingerman, 32, took his life by firing a rifle bullet through his abdomen.

Dismissed from his job at a local dairy three months ago, Klingerman had been unable to find employment.

U. S. PERMIT FEE ON PICNIC BEER

Clubs or associations serving beer at outings for which admission tickets are sold, or contributions made, must pay a government special liability tax as retail dealers in fermented malt liquors, whether or not the beer is sold at a profit.

Internal revenue officials say legalizing of 3.2 per cent beer did not wipe out a 1907 decision of the United States Treasury Department. It provides a special tax liability if clubs or individuals purchase beer and subsequently reimburse themselves through contributions or by charges.

Under the ruling persons arranging outings at which beer is to be served must obtain from the collector of internal revenue a license, known as a retail occupation tax certificate, which costs $20.

It's Funny How Chicago Pushes Its Lake Around

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

CHICAGO, July 26.—You've got to come to Chicago if you want to see people going places and doing things.

Take Lake Michigan for an example if you like water.

Chicago has pushed the lake back to make room for a boulevard system. Last year they pushed it back farther and put in the Century of Progress Exposition.

Next year they probably will fill the whole lake in and make it a park.

The town is growing so fast they're making plans about what they're going to do to the Pacific Ocean.

It gave towns like Paris, Berlin and Rome a head start of centuries and caught them on the first hill.

OFFICER SHINES AS GOAT JAILER

The Bridgeville police department is happy today.

First because it proved the falsity of an old rhyme detrimental to police:

"Brass button, blue coat
"Couldn't catch a nanny goat."

It proved that goats can not eat everything.

It proved that the cells in the station house are safe.

It rendered a service to the public.

As the police department (namely, John Mioali) walked down Washington avenue last night it spied two goats, apparently trying to enter a store.

It apprehended the goats on a suspicious person charge, and placed them in a cell, proving point one.

The goats tried to eat their way out and failed, proving points two and three.

Later a young lady, Mary (not the one who had a little lamb, but the one who owned the two goats) claimed them, and the service to the public was complete.

9 CANDIDATES FACE LAYOFF

At least nine county employes will be furloughed August 1 because they are candidates for office, the County Commissioners having decided they can't service two masters at one time.

They are A. D. Brandon and Harry R. Zoller, candidates for Council; William S. Haddock, Leo Riordan, Charles C. Campbell, candidates for Sheriff; Vincent Neeson, C. W. McKee, Robert A. Foley and Harry Mansion, candidates for Jury Commissioner.

This list does not include those county employes who are running for office in boroughs and townships. It is supposed they, too, will be furloughed for the duration of the campaign.

15 Pints of Beer Make Man 'Faint'

SPOKANE, Wash., July 26.—(AP.)—Lewis Larsen, 46, was brought into the emergency hospital in a "fainted condition."

Larsen, after being revived, said he "felt the heat coming on"—so drank between 15 and 20 bottles of beer in an effort to cool him off.

Mr. Washington, Police in Dispute About Melons

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad detectives and Steve Washington, McKeesport Negro, didn't agree in McKeesport Police Court as to where he had obtained a crate of watermelons he was carrying when arrested early today.

The detectives testified he had broken into a box car for the melons. Washington said he had found the crate in the street. He was held for a hearing before Alderman Alexander Lang on a larceny charge.

TEST SHOOTING IN BERRY PATCH

CHARLEROI, Pa., July 26.—(AP.)—The right of a farmer to protect his berry patch with a gun will be tested Friday.

Dominick Allessio, 20, of Belle Vernon, is in a hospital with two shotgun charges in his face and body.

Joseph Krepps, 51, will be given a hearing on charges of felonious assault and battery with firearms, brought by the boy's father.

Charles Allessio, the father, claims Krepps fired at five boys in his berry patch, then went nearer and fired a second time, striking Dominick's berry bucket and filling his side and face with pellets.

CITY LABOR JOB GOES TO WIDOW

Appointment of another woman as a "laborer" on city work relief was announced today by Public Works Director Edward G. Lang. She was given a job in place of Mrs. Helen V. Kniedler, 2026 Spring street, whose name appeared on the list by error.

Although engaged as a "laborer," as required in allotting work to persons receiving work relief, the woman, Mrs. Mary Joyce, a widow, of Suisman street, will be employed in clerical work. She will be paid the rate of 45 cents an hour.

BOYS IN HOLDUP 'WAVE' ESCAPE

First, they held up Frank Kurzeja and drove off in his automobile. Then they held up a filling station, getting $10. Another gas station netted $36.

By this time, a police squad car was on their trail. There was a 60-mile-an-hour gun battle.

It ended when the fleeing car crashed into a milk wagon and overturned in flames. The four bandits escaped, apparently uninjured.

'Black Maria' Pilot Held as Reckless

MAY BE READY FOR FALL ELECTION

County Commissioners In Word Battle Before Making Up Minds

Allegheny County may finally get vote machines that can be used in the fall elections, it developed yesterday, when County Commissioners awarded to the Thomas Spacing Company a contract to put locks and pinions on the 1,100 machines to prevent fraud.

The contract, which precipitated friction between Commissioners C. C. McGovern and William D. Mansfield, was let for $23,900, with the county furnishing the parts and the inspection.

McGovern, criticising the County Election Bureau and machine inspectors, declared he would not dare put the machines out for use without outside inspection, saying:

"This business is one of the most aggravating outrages in voting machine history. I may be dumb, and sometimes I think I am, but why do they always wait until the twilight before an election to bring a matter like this up?

"The rottenest election in history of the county was last year's, according to those federal records."

Commissioner Mansfield interrupted:

PEOPLE LOOK TO THEM

McGovern continued:

"But the people look to the Commissioners to prevent that sort of thing, and a lot was prevented. We've got $1,000,000 worth of machines and an election bureau with the largest personnel it ever had. They were sitting over there and didn't know anything about it until those fellows began to be indicted. And they don't know anything about it yet."

Commissioner Barr interrupted to ask what the contract for adjusting the machines meant, and McGovern answered:

"It means $40,000 more out of the bucket."

A letter from the company explained that the original bid of $36,000 had included buying parts, power and inspection, but that the new $23,900 bid eliminated this.

CALL THEMSELVES EXPERTS

McGovern commented:

"I haven't any faith in our inspection. Those inspectors are a lot of fellows running around

PAPOOSE BORN IN FAIR WIGWAM

CHICAGO, July 26 — (AP.) — In one of the wigwams at the World's Fair of the Pine Ridge reservation Indians, of Porcupine, S. D., today nestled a day-old girl papoose.

As yet unnamed, she is the daughter of Good Lance and his squaw, Owns-the-Horse, and she arrived in the world with only Annie Shout-At, wife of Chief Shout-At, in attendance.

The offer of Dr. Frank W. Baylor, in charge of the emergency hospital on the exposition grounds, to remove the mother and her baby to a comfortable bed was quickly refused when he arrived at the wigwam too late to be of any assistance. He said he had not been advised of the expected birth.

Soon after the baby was born yesterday, paint was applied to her face, according to an old Indian custom, and tonight Good Lance and other braves of the village planned a joyous celebration.

Lazy Cat Lets Trap Catch Its Dinner

ROCK HILL, S. C.—July 26.—(AP.)—A cat walked into the Sibley grocery store here and walked out again with a rat trap which held a mouse. Across the street the cat stalked, sat down, devoured the rodent, then picked up the trap and carried it back into the store.

Culvert Yields Batch Of Bogus $1 Bills

More than 200 counterfeit $1 bills were found yesterday in a culvert under a road near Midland, Beaver County. The fake notes were concealed in an old automobile tire.

Chief W. A. Landvoigt, of the United States Secret Service in this district, was notified of the discovery. For weeks his staff has been investigating the passing of spurious $1 bills in Steubenville and Wellsville, O., and other towns near the state line. It is believed the persons circulating them took fright and hid the bills, hoping to use them again when the investigators left. Several persons have been arrested.

The bogus bills were found by James Hovotaski, of North Jackson, O. Robert H. Branyan, Beaver County detective, informed the secret service operatives of the discovery.

SCHRAMM SEEKS NEW JUVENILE COURT POST

Attorney Gustav L. Schramm today announced as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the newly created Juvenile Court. Mr. Schramm already has been indorsed by the Democratic Lawyers' Committee, and a group of social and welfare agencies interested in creating the court.

Mr. Schramm

In his announcement Mr. Schramm promised that all appointments under jurisdiction of the court would be made without political consideration should he be elected, and that he would administer the functions of the court as a friendly and informal agency in the interests of children.

Mr. Schramm was born in Pittsburgh in 1898, is married and lives in the South Hills section. He attended public schools, then graduated from the University of Pittsburgh and Columbia. He has been a member of the faculty at Pitt since 1918 in the department of political science.

Since 1924, when he was admitted to practice, he has been associated with the Legal Aid Society. He is the author of a number of books on court practice, and a member of the American Bar Association, Allegheny County Bar Association, American Association of Social Workers, American Political Science Association, Masonic bodies and other fraternal organizations.

In his announceent he said:

"Allegheny County is preparing to launch a new Juvenile Court system whose success is vitally important in the future of the community. It is to be not a criminal court dealing out punishment to delinquents, but a friendly, informal agency with authority to protect and guide the lives of unfortunate and underprivileged children.

"The whole-hearted and unselfish interest of the community and of its public officials was demonstrated by the way in which both Democrats and Republicans co-operated in the Legislature to pass the bill setting up this new Juvenile Court.

"At the instance of the civic and social groups who have expressed their belief that my training and experience qualify me to carry forward this significant social development, and in the same non-partisan spirit already shown by Legislature and Governor, I now offer myself as a candidate for judge of this court.

"I do so free from all political commitments whatsoever, and I now make the resolute pledge that if I am elected I will administer the affairs of the court, including the making of all staff appointments, solely in the interest of the welfare of the children of this county and without regard to political considerations."

GROUP REFUSED EMPLOYE LIST

County Commissioners C. M. Barr and William D. Mansfield have refused the Citizen's Committee of Allegheny County a list of county employes, with Commissioner Mansfield commenting that if they furnished one group a list, every candidate would want one.

The request was made in a letter from Hannah J. Patterson, secretary of the committee. Mansfield said the organization could get its own list from the Controller's office.

California Decides On Retail Sales Tax

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 26.—(Universal.)—A tax of 2½ per cent on retail sales of tangible personal property has been decided on as the major revenue producing source of California's new taxation program.

ENGINEER OUT FOR MAYORALTY

John B. Sweeney, announcing as a candidate for Mayor of McKeesport, will seek nominations on both the Republican and Democratic tickets.

He is a civil engineer and has lived in McKeesport for 30 years, and has never held public office. He has been associated with many construction projects in Pittsburgh and McKeesport.

Headquarters have been opened at 339 Fifth avenue, McKeesport.

Sweeney would co-ordinate city purchases as a step toward economy and would reduce the salary of the City Treasurer, now more than that of the Mayor. He advises the construction of a City Hall to save rent paid for municipal quarters in private buildings. Municipal ownership enters his platform through the demand for a city-owned power plant, which he says would reduce rates and increase city revenue.

Lower street car fares and safeguards on Baltimore and Ohio crossings are urged, and he would create an advisory council of citizens to sit with the Mayor and City Council on municipal affairs.

MOTHER UPHELD BY EX-STAR

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(AP.) Mary Miles Minter, former film star, indignant at the suggestion that her mother might be open to prosecution in connection with the handling of Miss Minter's finances, criticized the judge who linked Mrs. Charlotte Shelby with her business losses.

Her statement yesterday was in answer to remarks from the superior bench by Judge C. S. Burnell holding that an investigation should be made of the financial transactions of Mrs. Shelby, the actress' mother.

He broached the subject in sentencing to prison Leslie B. Henry, former broker convicted of embezzling $40,000 from Mrs. Shelby. Judge Burnell opined that Mrs. Shelby in some respects was "equally guilty" with Henry.

Miss Minter said she and her mother had become reconciled after a long estrangement over financial matters.

VOTE MACHINE MAY BE READY BY FALL

with a screw driver in each pocket, pushing machines back and forth on the county payroll for $7 and $10 a day and calling themselves experts.

"They've been inspecting these machines for three years. What we want is some reputable outside concern to say they're fixed, they're as fool-proof and cheat-proof as they can be, so that the public will regain confidence in them. I'd rather take your word (he addressed George P. Thomas, president of the concern) than all these birds. What do you think of them, would you hire them?"

Thomas answered:

"Well, we'd prefer to hire our own men."

Mansfield interrupted:

"Would you say our men are competent and capable?"

McGovern declared:

"No leading the witness' answers. If he changed his answer now I wouldn't believe him."

Thomas said he thought the county inspectors were trustworthy, and McGovern added:

"You wouldn't say that if you had an inspector running up and down the state giving testimony either for or against them, where he could make the most money."

Mansfield again interjected:

"If you have any evidence you should give it to the board."

'NEVER THOUGHT OF THAT'

McGovern paused, and replied:

"That's right, I never thought of that. But doesn't it occur to you that I've said the same thing two or three times before."

Mansfield added:

"Several times you've mentioned Mr. Sklar."

McGovern added:

"I object to Mr. Sklar. As small as this board is, there should be unity about appointing men to such jobs. I objected to him and I still object."

Mansfield maintained the selection of men was good, backed by reputable people, and McGovern replied that other reputable people objected.

Thomas then agreed to rebate the difference between the original bid of $36,960 and the present one of $23,900 and fix the machines.

BOAT DISASTER CAPTAIN TO DIE

YAROSLAVL, Russia, July 26.—(AP.)—Nicolai Andreev, captain of a little Volga River excursion boat which sank July 9 with a loss of 98 lives, was sentenced today to be shot for allowing the vessel to be overcrowded.

His assistant, Leonid Kurakoff, was sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment and nine others were given terms of one to two years.

Their trial began shortly after the launch, carrying locomotive shop workers and their families, went down in the Volga three miles from this city, located 173 miles northeast of Moscow.

Although the craft had a capacity of only 125 passengers, twice that number were aboard.

VETS JOIN HUNT FOR BOY KILLER

SAN DIEGO, Cal., July 26.—(AP.)—Without a new clue, police today pressed into service 100 war veterans in their search of the city for the spot where Dalbert Aposhian, 7, was slashed to death.

Meanwhile a squad of officers combed the waterfront searching for a rowboat which might have been used by the slayer in transporting the mutilated body of the lad from the shore into the main stream of San Diego Bay, where it was discovered by sailors Monday.

Dalbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Aposhian, disappeared from his home July 18.

Ohio Boy, 7, Killed By Poisonous Liquor

SIDNEY, O., July 26.—(AP.)—A seven-year-old boy died here today after swallowing what police said was poisonous liquor. The victim was Robert Floyd.

Four persons alleged to have distributed the liquor were placed in jail pending the investigation.

LOST BOY FINDS SELF BY BEER PARLOR CLUE

Four-year-old Andy Sakmar, of 611 Carson street, today could take credit for aiding detectives in finding his home after he got lost hunting the hospital where his mother is ill.

Found wandering in the Boulevard of the Allies, near Grant street, last night, the boy was taken to the matron's department at Central Police Station. All he could tell was that his name was Andy and that he had attended a picnic with his brothers and sisters at Kennywood Park earlier in the day.

Detective Miles Smith was called. Starting from the Smithfield Street Bridge, Smith named business houses in Carson street. He asked Andy if he had heard of Zoglmann's, referring to a beer parlor operated by Wolfgang Zoglmann, at South Sixth and Carson streets.

Andy replied:

"He sells nickel beer."

Smith called Zoglmann and inquired if there was a boy missing from the neighborhood, and from him learned the identity of the police guest. A short time later Joseph, an elder brother, called for Andy.

The mother, Mrs. Anna Sakmar, has been in Mercy Hospital since June 27, Joseph told detectives.

MOVIE STRIKE IN FOURTH DAY

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 26.—(AP.)—A major strike troubled one of the country's biggest industries—movie making—for the fourth successive day as the producers of film romances informed President Roosevelt they would comply with his request for shortened hours and increased wages.

Thousands of technicians remained away from the studios, without benefit of the agreement by the owners to increase the purchasing power of employes, while non-union men were hired wholesale to fill their places in sound booths, studio projection rooms, property rooms and behind cameras.

Studio heads estimated production yesterday was at from 50 to 60 per cent of normal. Union leaders who called the strike said the tieup was almost complete. The producers said production would be practically normal today. Those directing the strike predicted hardly a camera motor would turn over.

Admiral Leigh Heads Naval General Board

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP.)—Rear Admiral Richard H. Leigh today was named chairman of the Naval General Board, succeeding Rear Admiral George R. Marvell, who will be relieved from active duty August 1 and retired October 1.

Admiral Leigh served as commander-in-chief of the United States fleet from August, 1932, to June 10, 1933.

HONEYMOONS IN ECLIPSE HERE

The honeymoon is at a low ebb in Pittsburgh.

The fancy of couples having business to transact at the local marriage license bureau still turns lightly to the old-fashioned bridal trip, it was revealed today.

Couples said:

"Yes, a honeymoon would be nice—if we could afford it."

Some added cheerfully:

"Marriage is good enough by itself."

Some were hopeful:

"Maybe we can take ours later."

One husband said with bravado:

The Omaha psychiatrist, Dr. G. E. Neuhaus, reported Monday as advising honeymoons, warned couples how their friends would react:

"Immediately they'll all say, 'Isn't it too bad John and Mary aren't going to have a honeymoon—we must see that they have a good time right at home!'

"The result will be that you'll be beseiged with invitations, phone calls and parties—worse than the most strenuous honeymoon."

Another pair summed up the situation:

"If the mountain won't come to Mohammed, Mohammed must go to the mountain. It's no use kicking—just wait for better times."

PINCHOT DELAYS GUARD REVIEW

CAMP RICKARDS, MT. GRETNA, Pa., July 26.—(INS.)—Gov. Gifford Pinchot early today postponed his scheduled review of 5,000 Pennsylvania National Guard troops until later in the weeks.

The troops were notified of the change as they stood in a cold drizzle in the company streets at 6.45 this morning awaiting orders to march to the parade grounds.

Physician Killed By Bank Robber

MORRISON, Tenn., July 26.—(AP.)—Dr. A. J. Clark, 62-year-old physician, was wounded fatally and two of three bank robbers were shot in an exchange of gunfire that followed a $400 holdup in the Citizens State Bank here yesterday.

Dr. Clark, with four other citizens who had been forewarned that the robbery was planned, opened fire as two of the robbers left the bank and headed for their automobile, in which the third was waiting.

URGES WOMEN'S 'NEW DEAL'

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., July 26.—(AP.)—Picking up her husband's famous phrase, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt also asked a "new deal" here last night, one which would give "a new social justice" and establish a new social order."

She put her hopes for this "new deal" in the women, who, she believes, must stop being home bodies and "for their own good" must be interested in the nation as a whole.

With "the new responsibilities of women" as her subject, Mrs. Roosevelt said the great responsibility was welfare of the nation.

She said she was speaking to the women in the factories and to those who had thought only of home making, because they had the opportunity to help direct the changes now being made so they would turn not entirely on material things. The changes, she believes, are inevitable, because the world has finally passed the state where "the first responsibility was that of the individual."

Mrs. Roosevelt was the guest of the Chautauqua Women's Club of which she is a life member. She motored here in her own car and left at 6:30 a. m. today for Washington.

MAN STABBED, FRIEND HELD

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—(AP.)—Charles R. Kimber, 28, wealthy assistant manager of a Philadelphia agency for a nationally known insurance company, was found stabbed in the throat in his fashionable apartment house suite yesterday.

At a hospital, where his condition is critical, he was quoted by detectives as saying his college classmate and friend of long standing, James L. Eustace, Jr., 28, also an insurance man, was to blame.

Eustace, questioned at his home, said "Kimber must be out of his mind," but after Kimber identified Eustace at the hospital, the latter was arrested and charged with aggravated assault and battery, with intent to kill.

HAZEN (KIKI) CUYLER

The return of Cuyler to the Cubs' outfield has been a big factor in the Bruins' climb to a threatening position in the National League race, and a revival of Chicago's pennant hopes. Kiki suffered a broken ankle just before the flag race opened. His big bat has been driving games into the Cubs' victory column since his recent return to action. Although the double defeat which the Bucs handed the Bruins at Forbes Field yesterday wiped all trace of a smile from Charley Grimm's face, the Chicago manager injected a touch of comedy into the hard-fought second game by disagreeing with Umpire Klem over the latitude and longitude of a Hal Smith pitch in the second inning. Grimm gazed skyward to indicate that he thought skyhigh the toss which Klem regarded as "strike two."

CHARLEY GRIMM

LYLE (BUD) TINNING

When the Pirates beat Tinning in the second game of yesterday's twin bill it was only the second defeat for Bud in his last 10 games. His return to winning form has been a feature of the Bruins' drive toward the top. These are Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph pictures.

Close Ones Baffle Cubs. Famous Battery Gone.
No Club Checks Lindy. Turf Greats Unmatched.
Gehrig Nearing Record. New Two-Mile Star.

BRUINS WIN FEW GAMES BY ONE RUN

EVEN WHEN THEY have their ace pitcher, Lonnie Warneke, on the mound, the Cubs can't win those close games. On the contrary, they lose more of them behind Warneke than any other member of their firing squad. Though the defeat in the first half of yesterday's double-header here was charged against Guy Bush, the finishing flinger, it was Warneke who started the engagement, and the result kept up the Bruins' record for repeated failure in close contests in which Lonnie does the pitching. The Chicago club has won fewer games by one run than any other team in the National League. Charley Grimm's athletes have scored only nine victories by that margin, and in the two big leagues only the Red Sox, with six, and the White Sox, with seven, have won a smaller number. The first game yesterday marked the fourteenth time the Cubs have been beaten by a single marker.

Lonnie Warneke

The Pirates have been fortunate in games decided by one run, winning 16 against 14 defeats. Only one club in the National has won more, and that club, strangly enough is Cincinnati, which last year was the goat of the league for losses of that type. The Reds have won 18 and lost 16 by one run; the Giants have won 16 and lost 14; the Phillies have won 14 and lost 8; the Braves and the Cards have won 14 and lost 16, and the Dodgers have won 11 and lost 14.

WARNEKE ALSO JOINED the list of star pitchers who have failed to stop the great hitting streak of Freddie Lindstrom, which up to today stood at 22 consecutive games for a new National League record for the season, and only four games behind the 1933 mark for both major loops, which Heinie Manush, of the Senators, set at 26 from May 25 to June 24.

When he made good in both games against the Cubs yesterday, Lindstrom had carried on his drive against all of the seven other clubs in the league, facing a total of 40 different pitchers. Besides Warneke, the list of front-rank pitchers who have been unable to halt Lindstrom includes Hubbell, Schumacher, Parmalee, Lucas, Clark, Fitzsimmons, Brandt, Cantwell, Frankhouse, Carroll, Mungo and Benge. Hitting .422 during his streak, Freddie has not gone throogh any game without a safety since Bill Hallahan held him hitless in the morning event on the Fourth of July.

JUDGING FROM THE sorry record the Dodgers have been making in this year's National League race, it doesn't matter what numbers they wear as far as being lucky on the field is concerned. They lose ball games just the same. But it would be hard to convince them that one number in particular is not a jinx.

The Brooklyn hoodoo is No. 14. Del Bissonette wore it, suffered a long string of physical ailments and finally was sent to the minors. Buzz Boyle drew it next and went down with muscular rheumatism. Sambo Leslie took it and was the victim of an attack of ptomaine poisoning. Then Joe Hutcheson got it and a sprained ankle followed, the first of his career.

BARRING THE POSSIBILITY of his being incapacitated in the meantime, it won't be long now until Lou Gehrig cracks the record for continuous playing, which Everett Scott set at 1,307 consecutive games from June 20, 1916, to May 5, 1925. Gehrig

PIRATES-CUBS BATTLE TODAY CALLED OFF

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The third game of the Pirate-Cub series, scheduled for this afternoon, was called off at 1 o'clock on account of moist conditions and threatening weather. In making the announcement, home officials stated the canceled contest would be played at Forbes Field Friday, August 11, as a single attraction. The date is an open one on the playing charts of both clubs.

The present series will close tomorrow with a single contest. Ladies' day will be observed. Friday's scheduled game with the Cincinnati Reds had been moved back to Saturday, when the Bucs and Rhinelanders tee off in a doubleheader. The two clubs will stage another doubledecker in Cincinnati Sunday.

The Oaklanders gave the Cubs a jolt yesterday as they defeated the Bruins twice in a double bill. The scores were 4-3 and 4-1. Steve Swetonic and Hal Smith pitched the home team to victory in the dual fight.

Lloyd Waner, benched in favor of Adam Comorosky, batted for Swetonic in the eighth and drove in the winning run with a single in the early game. Tony Piet opened the inning with a double off Guy Bush, who was charged with the defeat. Lonnie Warneke was a defeated pitcher when he left the contest in the eighth, but Babe Herman connected for a triple in this round that forced a deadlock. Waite Hoyt pitched the last round for Pittsburgh.

Smith held the Cubs to five hits in the nightcap. Bud Tinning was found for 11 safeties as the Bucs won this fray.

Fred Lindstrom ran his consecutive batting streak to 22 games as he nicked the enemy pitchers for five hits. Lindy's run is high for the National League this season.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE APHIS—The rate of increase of the Aphis or plant-louse is so enormous that were it not for their innumerable natural enemies the descendants of a single female produced and reproduced within a single season would represent organic matter sufficient to outweigh the entire population of the earth 8½ to 1. This is due to the fact that the young require but a few days to take up reproduction, and that the succeeding generations can, in turn, reproduce ad infinitum.

CARNERA REINSTATED

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—(INS.)—Primo Carnera, heavyweight boxing champion of the world, and his manager, William Duffy, were reinstated in Pennsylvania by a unanimous vote of the State Athletic Commission today. Both were suspended on August 28, 1931, following an altercation with a deputy at an open-air fight here.

Races On Tonight At Greenlee Field

Automobile racing under the lights will be tried at Greenlee Field tonight, with a score or more drivers entered. Entries will be posted under hippodrome regulations.

Due to the short distance around the track, which has been constructed around the ball field, estimates of the probable speed to be made by the racers are uncertain. The trials will get under way at 7:30 o'clock, with 12 qualifying for the finals.

U. S. Track Stars Split With Swedes

STOCKHOLM, July 26.—(AP.)—America's touring track and field stars won five events and lost two in a test against Swedish athletes yesterday at Vasteras.

The American setbacks occurred in the 400-meter relay, where Sweden, with a 10-meter handicap, won in 45.9 seconds against 46 flat for the invaders, and in the discus throw, where John Anderson, of New York, Olympic champion, yielded to A. Hedvall, a newcomer, and H. Anderson, Swedish champion.

ROG TRANSFERS ACTIVITIES TO JUNIOR LOOP

ST. LOUIS, July 26.—(AP.)—Phil Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns, today announced the signing of Rogers Hornsby as manager for the remainder of this season, 1934, and 1935. Hornsby succeeds Bill Killefer who resigned recently.

Ball made his announcement as soon as President John Heydler, of the National League, had informed the St. Louis Cardinals, with whom Hornsby has been playing this season, that all clubs in the league had waived on Hornsby's services. As the Browns are in last place they had first claim to Hornsby under baseball law.

Hornsby, who wore a Cardinal uniform yesterday, coaching on the first base line on Frank Frisch's first day as manager of the Redbirds, will take charge of the Browns within a day or two. The Browns are in Detroit today, and it is probably Hornsby will leave tomorrow night for Chicago to take over the reins in the first game of a series with the White Sox.

In assuming management of the Browns, Hornsby, a stormy petrel of baseball, is taking his fourth managerial job and his first position in the American League. Previously he directed the Cards, Braves and Cubs.

CONSISTENT TRAVELER

Hornsby's major league career, which took him half way around the National League circuit, began in 1915 when he was purchased by the Cardinals from Dennison, of the Wester Association, for a reported price of $500.

He soon became a St. Louis regular, was batting champion of the league for six years, and was the outstanding star around whom the Cardinals eventually built a title-winning team.

In 1925 Branch Rickey was deposed as manager of the Cards and Hornsby was appointed his successor. Taking the team in last place in June, Hornsby finished the season in fourth place. The next yeah he directed his squad to a pennant and a dramatic world series victory over the Yankees.

Differences between Hornsby and Rickey and Owner Sam Breadon led to his being traded the following winter to the New York Giants. After a year with the Giants, the Rajah was traded to the Boston Braves. Before the 1928 season ended he was named manager.

TRADED TO CUBS

The following winter he was traded to the Chicago Cubs for a reported price of $200,000 and five players. After serving in the ranks in 1929 and part of 1930 he succeeded Joe McCarthy as manager.

Hornsby revamped the Cubs and in 1932 had a team in contending position, but on August 2 was deposed by President Bill Veeck in favor of Charley Grimm. The Cubs went on to win the 1932 pennant.

Several months later he was signed by the Cardinals and returned to the team where he made his first reputation.

The legs that once permitted him to range with success around second base are not as strong as formerly. Handicapped also by other injuries, the Rajah has ap-

West Va. Cards First Legal Races

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 26.—(AP.)—West Virginia's first horse racing under the new state law will take place during the Charles Town Horse Show, August 10 and 11, Bowie (Md.) race officials have announced today.

The Bowie men said they will install pari-mutuel betting machines on the horse show grounds. Flat races and steeplechase runs will be held daily.

JUNIORS, BOYS OPEN CENTER NET TITLE PLAY

47 RACQUETERS COMPETE FOR TWO CROWNS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Hostilities in the annual Pittsburgh Center junior and boys' championship net classic began under Pittsburgh Tennis Association auspices on the clay courts of the P. A. A. early this morning. With 36 entries listed for competition in the 18-year group and 11 slated to joust in the 15-year division, it is quite probable that original plans calling for a two-day event will perforce be revised and the period of combat lengthened to include Friday afternoon.

BALD MEETS McMORRIS

In the boys' sector, Bill Fay, Rockwood stylist and darkhorse winner of Western Pennsylvania laurels, was primed to take on John Gare in a first-round feature duel.

NEW PARKS ENTRY

Larry Turney, Duke Prep racquet satellite, added his name yesterday to the array of contenders for the fourth renewal of the Pittsburgh Public Parks title tournament, scheduled to get under way on the Frick Park lot, Forbes and Braddock avenues, next Monday.

Chairman Smeaton will receive entries for the man-to-man milling until Friday evening at 6 p. m. He may be reached by mail at 7536 Kensington street, Pittsburgh, or by telephone at Churchill 3834.

Gibbons' Punches Stop Jack Steele

There was too much dynamite in the gloves of Gene Gibbons, Burke A. C., of McKeesport, star 118-pounder, last night, and the Tube City socker won by a technical knockout over Jack Steele, of the Superior A. C., in the third round. The knockout was the only one recorded at the amateur show staged by the St. Peter's A. A. on the North Side.

Eddie (Himself) McAtee broke into the limelight as an announcer. Al Slack and Alex Reed were the timers and Red McDermott the referee. The summary:

ROGERS HORNSBY...NOW MANAGER IN AMERICAN LEAGUE

Phil Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns, today announced that Hornsby had been signed to manage the Browns for the remainder of this season, 1934 and 1935. He succeeds Bill Killefer, who recently resigned. This International News Photograph Service picture of Hornsby shows him as manager of the Chicago Cubs, whom he piloted after leading the St. Louis Cardinals and Boston Braves.

BOBBY JONES' GOLF

By BOBBY JONES

Only Golfer Who Has Won U. S. and British Amateur and Open Championships in the Same Year.

Every person who plays golf has his pet golf course, and on this course there will be certain holes that he enjoys playing more than any others. I don't know how many stop to analyze the reasons for these preferences, and to study a hole to determine its good and bad points. To those who are not in the habit of doing so, I can only say that they are missing something of the game, for it is only through the observation and appreciation of such things that they will be enabled to enjoy their golf to the fullest.

One of the chief delights in playing golf is in discovering new possibilities in the shots to be made. A wide variety of strokes is, of course, afforded by our own inaccuracies. Many players will tell you quite seriously that they have all the different shots they want in trying to get the ball out of the places into which they drive it. But, after all, this is not the diversity which should be sought.

Bobby Jones

MOST INTERESTING COURSE

After one has played golf for a number of years and acquired some proficiency in the game—that is, in making the ordinary shots—he begins to look for new possibilities. There always is a big thrill in store when one can conceive and execute a stroke which is a little apart from those that are played time and time again. The course or hole which affords the most opportunities for the use of imagination and originality is the course or hole which will hold the golfer's interest longest.

Playing on a great many different courses, one often is asked if one does not consider this hole or that one a good hole. Often it is possible to say quite truthfully that the hole in question is very good. But most of the time it will be good only because it will require a good tee shot to be followed by a good second in order to fetch the green. There will be nothing puzzling, no cause for stretching the imagination in order to do something even the least bit unusual. Often the same two shots played here would serve equally well on a number of other holes that could be remembered. There will be no thrill or particular interest in such a hole, although it may be as good as it could have been made on the ground upon which it lies.

RUN-UP APPROACH PLEASES

Because we pitch wherever we can, and because we can pitch almost wherever we want to, any hole which forces or even suggests a run-up approach is out of the ordinary and therefore interesting. Playing at East Lake, my home course in Atlanta, I find myself looking forward to playing the twelfth hole when the ground is hard and the wind behind. On every other hole on the course the greens are closely guarded and banked up in the back to meet the shot. After a good tee shot, I know I will select a certain iron club and try to bang the ball straight up to the green.

But the twelfth hole is different. It isn't a great hole by any means. But the green slopes slightly away and to the left and there is a bad bunker on the left side. It is difficult to get down in two from a second shot that is either too short or too long. When the green is soft the second shot becomes a pitch like all the others. But when the green dries out and any sort of breeze follows the shot it is very difficult to hold the ball on the putting surface. Then comes the pitch and run, from 100 yards or so, dropping the ball just over a cross bunker 40 yards short of the pin. This is the shot I like best on the whole course. There are other places where I could use it, but, being able to pitch, I continue to do so, because it is easier. But, after 15 or 20 years, I can't get any thrill out of pitching to the same green from approximately the same place. The other shot is different.

Whatever can be done to increase the variety of strokes to be played enhances the interest of the game. Golfers like problems. They need not be too difficult, but by all means they must be different.

SEKAY, STAHL DEFEATED AT SOUTH PARK

By TOM BIRKS

Carl Kauffmann, three times national public links champion, is opposing Steve Borovitch, of Coraopolis, the medalist, and Ray Combs is meeting Charles Brenkus in 18-hole semi-fiinal round matches in the South County Park golf championship tournament this afternoon.

Kauffmann this morning won the feature match of the early rounds of the tourney by putting out Art Sekay, former Pitt star, 4 and 3, in the quarter-fiinals. Combs advanced today by beating H. Stahl, 1 up. Borovitch and Brenkus gained the semi-finals yesterday.

Kauffmann out	544	444	544—38
Sekay out	656	354	644—42
Kauffmann in	355	544
Sekay in	345	654

ALL-STARS LOSE

The public links team defeated the Country Club junior all-stars, 16 to 6, in the annual match over the Schenley Park links yesterday. The proceeds of the affair will be used toward defraying the expenses of the local contingent to the national public links tournament at Portland, Ore., next month. Only a small gallery turned out for the matches.

The feature foursome found Billy Marks, of Kiski, losing to Walter Phillips, former City champion, 1 up. Carl Kauffman, who hurried in from South Park, had a terrific battle on his hands to beat Fred Brand, Jr., of Shannopin, 1 up. Brand had four out-of-bounds shots on the home nine, and this entailed loss of stroke and distance.

Jack Benson, of the South Hills Country Club, playing in a foursome with Regis Wolff, Francis Lally and W. C. Pyle, tied Kauffmann for the best medal score of the day, 65.

WOMEN PLAY TODAY

The Western Pennsylvania Women's Golf Association are holding a one-day tournament over the links of the Greensburg Country Club today.

Tomorrow, at the Oakmont Country Club, the Pennsylvania State Golf Association will hold another one-day tourney.

On Saturday the leading professionals and amateurs of the district will begin to trek to Bedford Springs for the annual open championship. Vincent Eldred, of the Highland Country Club, is the defending champion.

A game that may settle the second-half championship in the City League is on the books for the Dormont High School field this evening, as the Book nine, holding a commanding lead, takes on the Dormont aggregation. The game is slated to get under way at 6:30 o'clock.

A victory for Books virtually will settle the second-half chase. Last night, Dormont improved its own position somewhat by beating Homewood, 10 to 5, and Whitaker beat the Gillespies, of Brentwood, 5 to 1.

In a second City League fray this evening, Homewood is to take on the Cochrans at Pleasant Valley.

Both the Crawfords and Homestead Grays turned in triumphs yesterday. At Beaver Falls, the Crawfords defeated the Chicago American Giants in a National Negro League game, 9 to 2. The Grays downed Port Vue, 6 to 1, at McKeesport.

Eddie Jacobs Wins In Virginia Tourney

HOT SPRINGS, Va., July 26.—(AP.)—Eddie Jacobs, of Baltimore, favorite to win the Virginia state tennis championships, started his play in the tournament yesterday with two convincing victories.

After defeating Henry Berklay, Jr., of Baltimore, 6-3, 6-2, he disposed of Ralph Johnson, of Lynchburg, 6-3, 6-0.

Youngster Annexes Tournament Medal

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 26.—(AP.)—Zell Eaton, of Oklahoma City, a 19-year-old youngster, romped off with the western amateur golf championship's qualifying test here yesterday with a 36-hole total of 72-69—141.

He was two shots in front of the veteran Jack Westland, the first day's leader, who had 71-72—143.

peared but seldom in the Redbird lineup.

While no details of the contract were made public, it was understood that Hornsby will be given more authority than any other manager Ball has had. Ball will retain the owner's right to do what he wants with his property, but Hornsby will have entire charge in the contemplated rebuilding of the Browns and will be responsible to no one except Ball.

WISHED WELL BY GRIMM

Charley (Lefty) Grimm, manager and first baseman of the Chicago Cubs, had this to say today when he learned that Hornsby had been made manager of the St. Louis Browns:

"Baseball is no different from any other walk of life—it has its trials as well as its smiles. I regret to see Bill Killefer stepping aside, but I wish Rogers Hornsby all the luck that can come to him in his new position."

Tidball and Budge To Perform Today

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—Failure of Jack Tidball and Don Budge, seeded players from California, to arrive, slowed down the Illinois State tennis championship tournament yesterday, although Gene Mako, Los Angeles, the favorite, advanced to the fourth round.

Tidball and Budge, who played in the Colorado state tournament at Denver last week, wired they would be ready to play today.

LOCAL BOY LOSES

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—(AP.)—Hopes of a Pittsburgh youngster of winning the first tennis tournament in which he has ever played were shattered in the quarter-final round of a novice championship yesterday by Howard Nauftulin, Philadelphia. The Philadelphian, also engaging in his first tournament, eliminated Norman Gurin, representing Taylor Allderdice High School, 9-7, 6-2.

LOCAL PUNCHER NO MATCH FOR BELANGER

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Tommy Loughran vs. Johnny Risko, 10 rounds; George Pavlik vs. Eddie Houghton, 8 rounds; Ray Trambitz vs. Carl Ogden and Paul Dazzo vs. Art Donovan, 6 rounds each, and George Turner vs. Jack Robinson and Davy Day vs. Andy Villion, 4 rounds each, Chicago.

Davy Abad vs. Danny Delmont, 10 rounds; Joe Huff vs. Clem Reed and Elmer Savage vs. Carl Schafer, 8 rounds each, St. Louis.

By JAMES MILLER

Charley Belanger, of Winnipeg, Canada, claimant of the Canadian light-heavyweight title, took Sunny Jim McVey's big league aspirations and his streak of seven straight knockouts for a walk and dumped them in the well-known scrap heap last night, when he handed the Hill district Negro a pasting in the 10-round feature of the double windup bill at Hickey Park, Millvale.

M'VEY RALLY SHORT

Just once in the fracas did McVey show any signs of the punching power that has been dropping opponents right and left. This spurt came in the third round, when McVey let fly with several hard rights and lefts to Belanger's midsection, and had the latter clinching.

Shortly before the final bell, Belanger opened up with a flurry of punches that had McVey a little woozy. McVey weighed 174 and Belanger seven and a half pounds more.

Charley Baxter, of the North Side, came from behind and nailed Jimmy Reilly, a former McKeesport boxer, but now of Fairmont, W. Va., with one of his lethal rights and dropped him for a nine count in the ninth round to win by a technical knockout. The bout was carded for 10 rounds.

Reilly got to his feet as the referee tolled nine, but staggered back into the ropes and fell to his knees as Baxter rushed toward him. Reilly's seconds threw in the towel to save him from further punishment. Reilly up until the time of the finish was outboxing Baxter. Baxter also floored Reilly in the third round, but Jimmy was up without a count. Reilly weighed 139¼ and Baxter, 134.

WILSON VICTOR

Elmer Wilson, East Liberty Negro, 138½, won a hard-fought affair from Young Bordell, of New Kensington, in the second bout, of six rounds.

Jack Dalcherone, a newcomer from Springdale, won the referee's decision over Freddie Jenkins, Hill Negro, in the opening number. The two judges split, Jock Simco voting a draw, Frank (Bull) Brown for Jenkins and Joe Orsini, who officiated the go, rightfully gave it to Dalcherone.

Al Grayber refereed the second and final bouts, with Joe Orsini working the first and semi-final. No show was announced for next week.

Between Rounds

Red Mason, who now is managing Jack Xing, the Little Rock (Ark.) middleweight, arrived in town yesterday and reported that Xing is in great shape for his 10-round main go with Sammy Slaughter, Negro belter, of Terre Haute, Ind., tomorrow night at the North Braddock Bowl.

Phil Ross, of Chicago, a middleweight, who has a record of winning 60 out of 62 fights, is in town looking for bouts that would lead to a meeting with Teddy Yarosz. Ross recently knocked out Kid Leonard, who has been going great guns around the Windy City. He also holds wins over Clyde Hull, Patsy Pollock and Pep Justo, among others. He has an uncle, Andy Ross, well known in the local fistic circle, living here.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—Uncle Nick is now rolling out maxims, etc., just like old Percy P. Proverb himself. Yesterday, anent the American League race (how do you like that "anent" folks?) I said that this year Youth would be served. Today's proverb is taken from the 48th verse of the second chorus of the sextet from "Lucia" and reads:

Nick Altrock

We had a lulu and went into first place. Then the Yanks had a wowser and displaced us. But the grand old rag will go to the outfit that can play about .625 baseball from now to the end of thes eason, dropping a few games here and there, but picking up a few more hither and yon.

Rome wasn't built in a day, a stitch in time saves nine, a rolling stone gathers no moss and why don't you come up some time, Big and Handsome. This is Uncle Aesop signing off.

Long's Sport Comment

up to date has played in 1,287 straight games without a miss, and needs only 21 games more to pass Scott's mark. He ought to get there in about three weeks. The Yankee first sacker may consider himself even more fortunate than usual in being able to keep up his streak this year, as first basemen have been the particular targets of the fates in 1933. Of the 16 gateway guardians in the two big leagues only four have succeeded in getting by so far without injuries. Gus Suhr, of the Pirates is one of the lucky four, and the others are Gehrig, Joe Kuhel, of the Senators, and Irving Burns, of the Browns.

Bill Killefer

AN ANGLE OF Bill Killefer's release as manager of the St. Louis Browns that has not been touched on is that, if the former star catcher does not gather another job somewhere in the big show, it will mark the passing from the majors of the last trace of one of the greatest batteries in the history of baseball.

Grover Alexander and Killefer formed a battery that must be given a place in the records with Radbourne and Gilligan, Clarkson and Kelly, Keefe and Ewing, McMahon and Robinson, Russie and Farrell, Breitenstein and Peitz, Mathewson and Bresnahan, Johnson and Street, Brown and Kling, Adams and Gibson, Grove and Cochrane, and other outstanding pitcher-catcher combinations of the past.

JUST AS ALEXANDER, now with the House of David team, was one of the mightiest pitchers of all time, Killefer also ranked with the greatest catchers of any period. Killefer became Alexander's regular catcher after joining the Phillies in 1912, and their battery work was a big factor in the Phils' only pennant victory, that of 1915.

They were together later on two other clubs, first as a battery for the Cubs, to whom they were sold in December of 1917 for $50,000, and next on the Cardinals in 1926, when Killefer was a coach while Alex continued pitching.

NOW THEY'RE WAITING for the Travers Midsummer Derby at Saratoga and the Realization at the Belmont Park meeting in the fall to furnish the answer to the turf riddle among the 3-year-olds. Racing men think that perhaps Mr. Khayyam, winner of the American Derby, Wood Memorial and Chesapeake, will hit his best stride again then and clinch the championship of the division, a title that has been left in a muddle by the showings in turn of Broker's Tip, Head Play, The Darb, War Glory, Hurry Off and Inlander. But racing men agree that regardless of the standing at the finish, the 3-year-olds of this season are little more than rank in-and-outers, with no chance for an outstanding champion like Man o' War, Zev, or Gallant Fox.

BACK IN 1920, Man o' War was the undisputed king of thoroughbreds, when he annexed the Preakness, Withers, Belmont, Dwyer, Travers, Realization, Stuyvesant, Miller and Potomac Stakes. In 21 starts in his two seasons as a juvenile and a 3-year-old he was beaten only once.

Zev, in 1923, won the Kentucky Derby, Withers, Belmont, and Realization and then defeated Papyrus, Epsom Derby winner, in an international match race. In 43 starts in three years he was unplaced only seven times. Gallant Fox, in 1930, captured the Wood Memorial, Preakness, Kentucky Derby, Belmont, Dwyer, Travers and Lawrence Realization Stakes. In 17 starts he was unplaced only once. They were horses, those three.

OTHER BOXING MANAGERS may complain of their ill luck as real and imaginary woes pile up, but Johnny Buckley, Boston's veteran handler of front-rank fistic talent, thinks the fates have treated him a little more harshly than the rest of them during the present year.

Edwin Wide

First he lost Ernie Schaaf in a tragic manner when death ended that fighter's career. Then Jack Sharkey was stripped of his world heavyweight championship in his first defense of it, and now Buckley's latest hope, Adolph Heuser, German light-heavyweight, has been knocked off by Unknown Winston.

BECAUSE HE HAPPENED to do it on the same day that Jack Lovelock's mile in 4.07.6 claimed everybody's attention, Joe Mangan, Cornell runner, received little credit for covering two miles in 9:15.4, but track coaches are talking about it now as one of the best performances of the year, all the more notable because it was Mangan's first race at that distance. The records show some remarkable runs at two miles. Only a year ago, the veteran Paavo Nurmi did the distance in Finland in 8:59.6. On an indoor track in New York in 1925, Nurmi ran two miles in 8:58.2. Another star at that route was Edwin Wide, the Swedish school teacher, who made 9:01.4 in Germany in 1926. Ten years ago, Joie Ray, now a marathon dancer, was clocked on a flat indoor track in 9:08.4. Mangan may threaten some of those marks when he becomes more accustomed to the distance.

The champion P. A. A. squad tightened more closely its grip upon top position in the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League Division I race last evening by sweeping all three of its play-off tilts with Rockwood as the Edgewood array, struggling valiantly to head off the Red and Gray with a final spurt, dropped a doubles verdict in the last of its tussles with Westinghouse.

The ultimate team tally of the Winged Head triumph over Rockwood read 7-2, with Edgewood's decision at the Electrics' expense being 6-3.

BALD-GRIER LOSE

Finishing off a partly played singles tilt with Thompson, of Rockwood, Paul Sullivan, P. A. A. entrant, dropped the second set after resuming at 2-4, but contrived to rally to win out, 6-4, 4-6, 6-0. In the doubles, Dr. Dave and Billy O'Loughlin trimmed the slashing youngsters, Ralph Bald and Bob Grier, 6-0, 6-2, while Dr. John O'Loughlin and Sullivan pulled up from 2-4 in both sets to nose out Thompson and Henry Ackerman, 6-4, 6-4. The play-off was shifted from Rockwood to the P. A. A. lot.

At Westinghouse, the Electric veterans, Bill Clardy and Tom Spooner, fought courageously and at length achieved a 2-6, 7-5, 7-5 win from John Brown and Eddie Alcorn, hard-driving Edgewooders.

FOUR FRAYS DIVIDED

In Division II, College Avenue and Bureau of Mines split four frays evenly last night, so that, with the Minesmen's two successes and one reversal before last Saturday's downpour, the Collegians now trail, 4-3. One singles engagement will be finished this evening, with the remaining joust set for Friday.

Other affairs today send Westinghouse to Shannopin, College Avenue to University Club, and Emsworth to Washington Heights.

SHARON LEGION NINE WINS

The South Hills and Sharon American Legion junior baseball teams will battle at Forbes Field tomorrow evening for the Western Regional title in the state championship tournament.

Sharon gained the final round by beating Butler, 6 to 1 at Greenville yesterday, to annex the Northwestern title. South Hills won the Southwestern crown Monday by nosing out Uniontown at Greensburg.

In yesterday's game at Greenville, Klasic, on the slab for Sharon, limited Butler to five scattered hits. The score:

STOCKS STEADY, WEAK SPOTS CROP OUT

NEW YORK, July 26.—Stocks were generally steady to firm in the early trading today although a few scattered weak spots occurred, notably U. S. Steel, Allied Chemical and Union Pacific, which lost around a point. Trading was quiet.

Case rose 2½ while General Motors opened a point higher on an initial transaction of 4,000 shares. Other shares up a point or more included New York Central, Du Pont, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Telephone, Western Union and Commercial Solvents.

Another shift in stock exchange hours advanced the market opening to 11 o'clock instead of 12 and set a 2 o'clock closing time. There will be no trading on Saturday.

News receiving comment in Wall street included the second quarter earnings statements of two of the country's big corporations, U. S. Steel and General Motors, both of which reflected the business revival. Motors' net for the period, equal to 90 cents a common share, was eight times that of a year ago, while the steel corporation enjoyed an operating profit for the first time since the last three months of 1931. Wall street was particularly impressed by word that the company's July operations were averaging 53 per cent of capacity.

Meanwhile, mid-week trade statistics gave evidence of some letdown. Steelp roduction, said Iron Age, has shaded to 57 per cent from 58, although the important scrap markets have reached new highs, perhaps in expectation of a general rebound in activity early this fall. Electric power output last week showed a slightly smaller increase over a year ago than had been registered in the previous week, the first interruption of the progressively higher trend that had been evident since May.

Dollar exchange firmed. Sterling was off 4 cents to $4.62 in the early dealings. French francs dipped 3½ points to 5.42 cents.

WHEAT PRICES TAKE JUMP

CHICAGO, July 26.—Big fresh upturns in grain values took place early today. The outstanding factor was a damaging heat wave in the spring wheat belt north and south of the Canadian border, with official Canadian reports telling of wheat crop blighted irreparably over a widespread territory.

With buying on a large scale, wheat opened 2 cents to 3½ cents a bushel higher, and continued to mount. Corn started at 1 to 2¾ advanced, and subsequently soared further.

Foreign Buying Again Making Appearance In N. Y. Stocks

Foreign buying was reported to have been a substantial factor in stocks recently for the first time in some weeks. The bulk of such demand, according to New York sources, ordinarily well-informed, originated with London interests. This buying was influenced largely by the thorough-going nature of the correction which the market had experienced in the closing days of last week, but also to some extent by the belief in British financial circles that the dollar is slated for still lower levels in the world market. The latter view is a bit at variance with recent comments of Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, who expects the dollar to recover somewhat in the next few months.

Interests reputedly conversant with Washington ideas do not find in recent events any justification for the belief held in many quarters that the administration is disposed to abandon, even temporarily, its quest for restoration of commodity prices to projected levels. On the contrary, they maintain that such plans are intact and to be carried out. What Washington does discountenance, however, is unhealthy interference on the part of speculators such as brought to light last week in corn and wheat. Enforcement of the rule which limits individual holdings in wheat to 500,000 bushels will, it is believed, prove sufficient to thwart the erection in the future of individual pyramids such as that which toppled last week.

The financial community has made rapid progress in getting its affairs back into shape. Inquiry around the street develops the fact that all but a handful of brokerage firms have completed the task of clearing up the accumulation of unfinished business which threatened to tie things up badly late last week. And the laggards, it is said, comprise principally those houses which felt the impact of the more disturbing phase of things in the grain market.

Wall Street found upon listening to President Roosevelt on the radio Monday night, that it had been unduly exercised over certain matters. There had been persistent discussion of Washington reports intimating that the President was quite disturbed with the growing proportions of speculative activity recently. And accordingly there were many who felt that he at least would touch on that phase of the general order of things in passing. Thus, in addition to expressing satisfaction with the round up of the situation as set forth in his remarks, the financial community was plainly relieved when he completed his speech without any reference to securities.

Some traders are equally adept at catching the turns, whether directly on the scene or far removed from their usual haunts. The story is told of one prominent operator, who figured largely in street gossip during the bear market, who has been in London these last few weeks. But distance, it was said, was no deterrent to his making expenses by dabbling in the market. He is credited with having made not one, but two quite handsome turns in the alcohol stocks when they were the center of speculative activity.

Although there was a net loss of $218,468 in April for the American Rolling Mill Company, the business turned in May and for the first time since May, 1931. The company recorded a small profit in that month. Estimated profits for June are more than sufficient to offset the loss in April so that results for the second quarter will be in the "black." Consolidated net loss in the first three months was $966,594. At present, the company's plants are operating at 78 per cent of capacity. There are substantial orders on hand and prospects for future business are excellent.

BUSINESS NEAR 1923-25 RATE

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(INS.)—In the most favorable business review issued since the tital wave of depression swept industry of America aground, the Federal Reserve Board announced today that activity had increased to 89 per cent of the 1923-1925 average.

That compared with 60 per cent in March, on the basis of the seasonally adjusted index, and 77 per cent in May. The board said:

"In June, as in the two preceding months, industrial activity increased rapidly and in the first half of July there was some further advance. Factory employment and payrolls showed a considerable increase. Wholesale commodity prices rose rapidly until the third week of July when prices of leading raw materials showed a sharp decline."

The advance, especially that of the first half of July, was contrary to the normal seasonal tendency which at this time of the year is downward. The stimulation afforded by the various recovery measures is now expected to carry the country through the summer into the normal autumn upward movement, without a slump, an objective aimed at by the administration.

Gripping Story of Life Behind The Scenes at Hollywood

By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

CHAPTER XII.

Lucky was beginning to feel easier now. The theory sounded perfectly plausible, and Mulrooney seemed in the mood to swallow it entirely. The clear blue eyes of the detective were as unsuspecting as a child's.

"I'll admit that you've explained your connection with the case very well," said Mulrooney in his slow, contented voice. "There's only one or two things yet that I don't understand, Cavanaugh . . . Why are you and Miss Luneska lying to me?

"I'm a little hurt because you think I'm so dumb. Right after we found the body and discovered the robbery, I naturally talked to Kaufmann, the manager of this theater. He identified the dead man as the fellow that you, Cavanaugh, and himself brought up to this office—a bird that wanted to talk to Miss Luneska. Kaufmann said something about blackmail. If you're going to lie to me Cavanaugh, why don't you rig up something that's worth while? Isn't it the truth that Miss Luneska sent you back here to settle with that dead man—and you did settle with him?"

Leni Luneska sat stark still and white in her chair. She was as motionless as though her heart had stopped beating. Her white bosom was still and breathless.

MANAGER FORGOTTEN

A sickish feeling developed in the region of Cavanaugh's solar plexus and spread through his entire body. His deeper self was shocked with astonishment that his cool mechanical brain had betrayed him. In the past he had been justified in setting a high value on his own mental adroitness, but something new—something unaccountably mysterious had stolen in upon him and conflicted with his powers of thought.

A subtle mental narcotic had gotten into him and drugged his intelligence.

He could hear his thoughts talking silently. They were saying, "I've ruined everything. I am an idiot. Undoubtedly I will be arrested and tried. Instead of covering up everything for Leni I've ruined her. How on earth could I have forgotten that Kaufmann would naturally tell his story about Kruger?"

"I've always considered you one of the smartest chaps I know," Mulrooney was saying to him. "Only a moron would try to get away with that story you told me. What happened to you anyway, Cavanaugh? Did this woman—I mean Miss Luneska—get you balled up?"

ODDS AGAINST PAIR

Cavanaugh did not answer him immediately, but Mulrooney's last question swept through him like fresh cold air, clearing away a fog. It was the truth.

The effect of Leni Luneska upon his senses had addled him, had set in motion the unguessed powers of emotion that had overwhelmed his common intelligence. Even now he could scarcely realize how completely—yet how secretly—the strange force was at work within him.

He was stunned as every man is who comes upon the realization that some particular woman has wrecked all his native shrewdness. He had no resentment against Leni. Indeed, he felt an actual stab of remorse for what he had let her in for. His face was burning with the shame of a man who understands he has bungled completely.

"Did you kill that man?" Mulrooney asked him abruptly.

"I did not." Cavanaugh returned. To his own ears the words had a hollow hound.

"Well, maybe you didn't," Mulrooney said. "I can tell you this, though—if you ever go before a jury, the odds are ten to one against you."

Cavanaugh was fully aware that his situation was desperate.

Mulrooney's words rang with truth. If he ever went before a jury the odds against him would easily be ten to one. It made it clearer to him to state the odds in gambling terms. The percentage against Leni Luneska was infinitely greater—a hundred to one that she would be dragged through the mud of exposure.

The only thing that stood between the both of them in calamity was the inadequate organ called a brain between Lucky Cavanaugh's throbbing temples.

"The simplest thing to do," Mulrooney said easily, "is for both of you people to tell the truth. It would be a novelty that would save us all a lot of trouble."

"You wouldn't believe the truth," Cavanaugh said.

"I might," said Mulrooney. "You're supposed to be a gambler. Why don't you take a chance and come clean?"

THINKS OF LENI

In all of his experience Lucky Cavanaugh had never before been driven into a corner. It was a stifling sensation. The truth, possibly, might get him out of trouble, but it would blast Leni Luneska.

In the past he had always put himself first with a frank, good-natured selfishness. But now he was thinking about somebody else—about a woman. But not exactly thinking. He was feeling.

The only thing that could save him was his instinct and intuition—that blind streak of fate and fortune that had given him the name of Lucky. That such a force operated in the affairs of men he had not the slightest doubt. His luck had operated on a thousand different occasions—he lived by it. He was immune from the misfortune and disappointments of other men. Wherever he went he rode on a golden tide . . .

"Maybe the lady would like to tell the truth," suggested Mulrooney.

Leni looked straight at Cavanaugh, as though he—instead of Mulrooney—had her fate in keeping.

"I will stand by whatever Mr. Cavanaugh says," she declared.

An instinct to protect her ran like a warm current through his whole body. Slowly the dark idea was forming in his mind that it would be necessary for him to take the whole burden of everything upon his shoulders in order to exculpate Leni completely. Yet no sane man would willingly assume the responsibility for a murder.

"Don't you say a word!" he heard himself crying to Leni. It was exactly as though another person had spoken the words.

Synopsis

At the premiere of her latest picture, Leni Luneska, beautiful star, is stunned by the appearance of her jailbird husband. He insists upon recognition as her husband. Lucky Cavanaugh, handsome gambler, tries to make Kruger leave. Kruger empties his gun at Cavanaugh without effect, then rushes into the next office in a rage. He surprises burglars looting a safe and is shot dead. Later as Leni and Cavanaugh are about to leave the theater to avoid questioning, Detective Mulrooney stops them. They deny knowing Kruger, Cavanaugh telling a plausible story of how he and Leni met, fell in love, and were running away from Leni's elderly escort.

Now Go On

"Why are you and Miss Luneska lying to me?" asked Mulrooney.

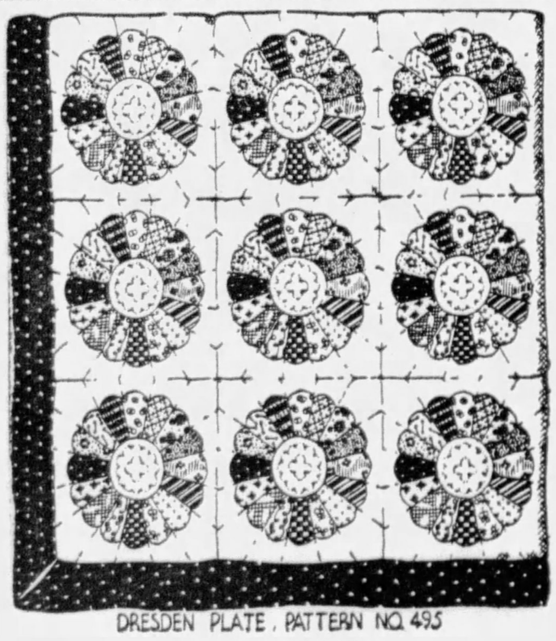
PATCHWORK QUILT PATTERN



DRESDEN PLATE. PATTERN NO. 495

By LAURA WHEELER

Scraps of material—varied in pattern—varied in color—all cut from the same pattern piece—sewn together with a center and edges of white, and the result is the lovely, dainty, Dresden Plate Quilt. This old favorite was especially popular as a Friendship quilt, the varied patches being contributed by a circle of friends, thus adding to the quilt's sentimental value. At times only the plate itself was made of patchwork and then appliqued on a plain block. In pattern No. 495 the entire block is given in simple patchwork pieces, thus permitting the quiltmaker to do her block either way.

The pattern comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, quilting motif and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Are you saving coupons, fellows?

Don't hesitate to send them in. Remember, we haven't much time. Coupon number five is printed right below here today. There will be a new one every day this week.

Three coupons, all of a different number, will be exchanged ABSOLUTELY FREE for a strip of eight tickets—good for all the thrilling amusements in West View Park. The date—TUESDAY, It's the Junior Patrol's first picnic.

And remember, too, fellows—the coupons to be exchanged for tickets must be MAILED to the Sun-Telegraph. Only fellows who are registered as members of the Junior Patrol can get them—be sure that your membership card number is on every coupon.

We have a letter from Hazel Simpkins today. She tells us that she will be the captain of a patrol when she gets back home from a vacation at her grandmother's. And she asks us to send her an armband. We're sorry, Hazel, but you must be elected captain by a meeting of the members and you must send the roll of Junior Patrol members belonging to your patrol to headquarters before we can send you an armband.

Here's a letter which makes us feel extra good right now. It's from Frances White, of 702 Means avenue, Bellevue. She says:

"Our patrol seems to be doing very well. We occasionally have visitors. I don't think anything can break it."

That's a good idea about visitors and we hope all patrols have visitors every now and then.

Do you have 10 members on your roll, Frances? If you do, send their names to headquarters, and we will send you an armband—orange and black, Junior Patrol colors!

No, we do not have any more news about Johnny after Spike carried him home safe—dripping wet from being rescued in the river.

Right now, Spike and Snuggins—and Spike's sailor brother, too, are all excited about the Junior Patrol picnic. They are going to take choc'late cake along in their lunch baskets, Snuggins says!

Now clip the coupon right below here—get two others with different numbers, and send them in—a free strip of tickets are as good as yours. To save stamps, you can send dozens of coupons in one envelope!

Gov. Theodore Gilmore Bilbo, big research man from the South, wants the administration "to sell American women the idea of wearing cotton lingerie."

It would be a nice gesture for Northern women to wear cotton lingerie—if for no other reason than to make it possible for Southern women to wear silk lingerie.

The administration might do something in the way of using cotton, instead of party men, to stuff into shirts.

The timbre and tempo of his letter indicates he would like to berl 'em in erl.

He thinks they should go back of the bars so long they would learn to play them like harp strings.

It's a beautiful retaliatory thought and denotes one who is a lovable character. One who wants his justice tempered with 10, 20 or 30 years.

For centuries, the master minds have dwelled in the pent house over Caesar's wife, who, herself, was one floor above suspicion.

As all whales washed upon the beach were the property of royalty, so, everything to the left of the decimal point was theirs.

To be suddenly investigated by the people versus power, was degradation enough. Think of the shock of being forced to drag your books into court and having to explain the meanings of hieroglyphic notations.

For the first time in history the bankers were embarrassed. When they were called upon to explain something they didn't know living facts from the kittens that are drowned.

It was during the cross-examinations of the master minds that we realized they were dumb. Each one was forced to consult his huddle of advisory yoemen. Not a giant intellect could aye, yea or whattsis. He knew less about his business than an army carpenter at mess call.

All the legends, all the awe and all the hokum were scattered to the quartet of breezes. We realized the master beans were just stuffed blouses.

And that's why we say they have suffered enough.

Power a Public Trust

Sound Views Concerning Regulation Are Expressed By the New Federal Chairman

The President's appointment of Frank R. McNinch, of North Carolina, as chairman of the Federal Power Commission assures the direction of this important body sympathetically with the President's purposes and in keeping with the principles of his administration.

Although the most important public office which Chairman McNinch has held is that of mayor of Charlotte, North Carolina, he brings to his new office a viewpoint which is altogether sound, and in his first statement issued as chairman he certainly shows a clear grasp of the fundamental problem which is involved in his new duties.

"Power is a necessity in the present state of society," said he, "and the power industry is a social agency, indeed a governmental agency, where hydro-electric power is involved."

He then sounds a note which has been much too absent from the thinking and the practices of the utility interests.

"Though privately administered," the new chairman adds, "its administration is a public trust in the interest of the consuming public. It offers no fair field for stock jobbing, intercorporate trafficking or any other exploitation of the public. Every dollar honestly invested is entitled to a fair return and no more; every dollar paid by the consuming public is entitled to a full return in service and no less."

Here we have in pithy phrase a comprehensive statement of the whole theory of governmental regulation of public service enterprises, and particularly of the power and utility industry.

This declaration should be the point of departure and the ultimate goal of every regulative body and Public Service Commission in the country.

"No honestly administered power company," remarked Chairman McNinch, "has anything to fear from this commission, but crooked ones would do well to make straight their paths."

A very sound position for the Federal Power Commission to take regarding its functions and duties!

It is precisely in such a spirit that the people of the United States desire and intend that government regulation shall be applied to such of their activities as are affected by a public interest and therefore come properly within the scope of regulation in the interests of the people as a whole.

Distance No Barrier

A Washington County School Furnishes a Good Illustration of Centralization Possibilities

The Sun-Telegraph commented not long ago on a public school in the eastern part of the state to which pupils come from a considerable distance. An even more impressive example of the same sort of thing, much closer to Pittsburgh, is now directed to our attention.

Of the 833 pupils who attend Trinity High School in North Franklin Township, Washington County, 551 live two miles or more from the school, 218 live five miles or more, 75 live 10 miles or more, 11 live 15 miles or more, and one lives 18 miles distant from the school.

They go back and forth between their homes and the school every day, and last year 49 of those living five miles or more distant were neither absent nor late in arriving at school on a single day.

This school serves 18 country school districts in Washington County and one in Greene County. It furnishes a good illustration of the possibilities of centralizing on one good school and doing away with inefficient small schools serving a much more limited area.

Automobiles and good roads present an opportunity to do away with some of the multifarious school districts and other small governmental units that were set up in pioneer days. By eliminating some of them money can be saved, and improved service given.

Good Fishing

Bass and "Muskies" Could Be Caught in Pittsburgh Waters If Stream Pollution Were Stopped.

The fishing season is at its height, and some good catches are reported.

Two Pittsburghers at Conneaut Lake have each caught a 15-pound muskellunge. A wall-eyed pike weighing 9¾ pounds has also been taken at Conneaut.

The largest smallmouth black bass so far officially reported was caught by a Warren angler in Conewango Creek. It was 21½ inches long and weighed four pounds, 11 ounces. Three other bass exceeding 20 inches in length have been caught in that same neighborhood.

Fish wardens report that bass are more plentiful in Pennsylvania this year than in many years past.

This reflects a great deal of credit on the Fish Commission. Pennsylvania is badly handicapped with respect to fishing by the fact that many streams are polluted with poisonous drainage from mines and mills. The commission has accomplished wonders in the unpolluted streams.

There was splendid fishing in the rivers around Pittsburgh in the early days of the city, and there again would be if a way could be found to stop pollution.

The situation, happily, is not hopeless.

Well Done, Miss!

A Graceful Bow to Ann Roe, of Sewickley, Who Did Something About the Weather

We're going to keep an eye on Miss Ann Roe, for whom we predict a brilliant future.

Ann Roe, who is not yet 12, circulated a petition in Sewickley the other day, then trooped over to Borough Manager Hiteshew. The petition said:

"Will you please turn on the sprinkler today, for it is going to be very hot."

The sprinkler was turned on, of course, and Ann Roe and her friends went sprinkler-ward. And Mark Twain, who once observed that everybody complained but nobody ever did anything about the weather, finally got some action.

False Foundation Stones

Restless cubes that roll and rattle,

Any permanent foundations,
For the house in which we dwell.

On the tumbling, rolling "bones;"
There is no place in the structure,
For these false foundation stones.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Fifty-Fifty Love

She's a nice girl who is struggling along on next-to-nothing a year—and he's a nice man, who used to take her to restaurants and places, but can't afford it any more. And SHALL she invite him in for "a cuppa cawfee and a sandwich," every time he takes her motoring? Or isn't that spoiling the male sex?

* * *

It all depends. If he's a thoroughbred and she's a thoroughbred and they're fond of each other, they'll work it out on a fifty-fifty basis long before this article appears.

We women have fought for "equality"—and now we've GOT it. And it means equal RESPONSIBILITIES as equal privileges. Oh, yes, we've got it—right on the chin!

Nowadays there are male gold-diggers as well as lady gold-diggers—and there's a gigolo for every vamp. "Grifting" (as Walter Winchell calls it) is no longer a one-sex affair. It works both ways.

"There is no sex in crime"—and there is no sex in reciprocity or fair play. I feel just as sorry for a man who is on his uppers as I do for a woman. Indeed, I feel SORRIER for him. Because any "suffering" from a toothache to a pain in the pocket always goes so much harder with the hardy sex than it does with the sex whose portion has always been "suffering," and who are accustomed to empty pockets.

"I'll pay for the gasoline and furnish the car if you'll furnish the coffee and sandwiches" seems to me a pretty good example of fair play, if the man is a thoroughbred, and has nothing to spend on a girl, except the evening.

There WAS a time, when men simply "called on" a girl, evenings, instead of taking her out places; and she cheerfully fed them from the chafing dish just as a matter of course or a matter of hospitality.

* * *

Of course, the world today is filled with grafters and "grifters" of both sexes; and a girl is worse than foolish to let a male gold-digger impose on her. But there is very little difference in the status of the sexes, these times. And, if a thoroughbred needs or asks for "a cuppa cawffee and a sandwich," it's up to a girl to be a good pal and hand it out to HIM!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 26.—A dominant motif of novels, short stories, films and the theater is: "Back to the land!" The theme is to be stressed in three plays for the fall production. Magazine readers scour every manuscript for a tang of the soil. Many reasons are offered.

Largely the depression and break from cities. Pearl Buck's "The Good Earth" stimulated the idea along with Gladys Hasty Carroll's "As the Earth Turns" and Evans Wall's "A Time to Sow." Louis Bromfield's next novel is to be called "Farm," a rooty grapple with monotonous toil.

Paul Yawitz, a consistent attender of literary teas, discovers that Edna Ferber has been out in the Kansas wheat fields gathering color for a hayseed epic, while Fannie Hurst has been on a similar mission in Iowa. Sidney Howard is turning out a drama of the sun-scorched corn fields.

The advantage of this turn in literature for the writer is that stories of the farm and village bring royalties longer. Ed Howe's "The Story of a Country Town"—one of the best, by the way—is still a big seller, although written more than 20 years ago.

Juvenile baseball bubbles airy persiflage. Today in Central Park a pitcher was the sort who stuck out his tonque—remember Andy Coakley?—in winding for delivery. After watching him several innings a freckle-face on the sidelines screamed: "Hang a yo-yo on it, buddy!"

I had a letter the other day from one of the prosperous and contented veteran stage actresses who has gone over big in the movies. The list of such includes May Robson, Marie Dressler, Louise Dresser, Jessie Ralph, Louise Closser Hale, Maude Eburm—and Beryl Mercer. For them no more icy stage entrances, sleeper train jumps or stranded companies. Instead, peace, sunshine and 52 pay checks a year.

A depressing touch in the West Forty-second street debacle is the now dark New Amsterdam, once ace theater of the Rialto. For years it housed Ziegfeld's "Follies" and from it were regimented the productions of A. L. Erlanger. On its roof "The Midnight Frolic." For a generation it sparkled excitement and characters. There was the Dickensy house manager who wrote juvenile jingles for St. Nicholas—Malcolm Douglas. That wizard of the switchboard, Alice Poole, who never forgot a voice. Kindly Percy Thomas, scenic director, an authority in Thibetan paintings. High Pocket Ned Weyburn, stage director, whose bark was worse than his bite. Victor Kiraly, whose perfumed manners suggested a Viennese drawing room. So on.

At the New Amsterdam I heard Irving Berlin play a one-fingered composition and receive Ziegfeld's glum nod, which meant the tune would go into a show and make a fortune for the song writer. Here, too, I sat in at a conference where Gene Buck told of a fellow over at Hammerstein's with a rope and chewing gum that might be an attraction for the Frolic Roof. He was speaking of Will Rogers.

The New Amsterdam was the generating ground for Nora Bayes, Bert Williams, Leon Errol, Van and Schenck, Marion Davies, Frances White, William Rock, Walter Catlett, Frisco, Mary Hay, Mary Eaton, W. C. Fields, Eddie Cantor, Dolores, Lillian Lorraine, Fannie Brice, Bernard Granville, Vera Michelena, Dennis King, Martha Lorber, etc., etc. One could easily fill a column of stars. To say nothing of the list of chorus beauties such as Olive Thomas, Martha Mansfield, Jessie Reed, Allyne King, Emily Drange, Billie Dove and Ruby De Remer. The New Amsterdam, indeed, is hallowed with as much of that stuff called tradition as London's Old Vic. To see it gloomily deserted and flanked by flea circuses and one-armed lunches is something of a wrench.

A San Diego gentleman complains sharply about a brace of fiction writers whose plots are invariably the same. He says they belong to the "That's My Story and I'll Stick to It" school of writing. And he's upset. The late James Oliver Curwood admittedly had one plot and his characters were much the same. Yet he was able to make each novel appeal to all his readers year after year. His large book sales rarely varied.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Three married couples were talking about jealousy. One wife openly defended it—said she practiced it, because she had "a jealous nature," and considered it an essential part of successful marriage. The others condemned it in theory, but confessed to its twinges in practice.

Out of their chatter came this questionaire. Clip it out. Spring it the next time Your Crowd gets together. Then let's hear the answers!—

WHAT IS JEALOUSY?

IS IT, AS THE SENTIMENTALISTS CONTEND, A CONFESSION OF LOVE?

Is there no true love without jealousy?

DOES MARRIAGE GIVE THE RIGHT TO INDULGE IN JEALOUSY?

SHOULD A WISE WIFE ALWAYS SUSPECT HER HUSBAND—AND MANAGE HIM ACCORDINGLY?

OR IS JEALOUSY, AS THE PSYCHOLOGISTS CLAIM, A CONFESSION OF FEAR?

Are we jealous because we are secretly afraid that we "haven't the goods," and live in dread of losing love to some smarter or more attractive competitor?

Would our jealousy cease if we were sure of ourselves?

Should we, therefore, go to work on ourselves, instead of trying to restrain other people through anger and suspicion?

And would our causes for jealousy vanish if we'd do this instead of blowing up?

OR IS JEALOUSY NEITHER AN EXPRESSION OF LOVE NOR OF FEAR, BUT PLAIN CUSSEDNESS USING A ROMANTIC ALIBI?

Are we jealous merely because we're so conceited we want all the attention?

Or so domineering we desire to boss the other fellow's every impulse and action?

If so, is this curable?

CAN JEALOUSY BE HELPED?

ARE SOME PEOPLE "NATURALLY JEALOUS" AND UNABLE TO CONTROL THAT FEELING?

Or is everybody "naturally jealous"?

Can we learn to control jealousy, just as we can learn to control other severe emotions?

Is the "loved" one secretly flattered by jealousy, however he or she may protest against it?

Do jealous tantrums, disgusting as they may seem to outsiders, really serve to hold hearts and homes together?

Or does jealousy alienate and finally kill love?

Does it bring about the very catastrophe which the jealous one fears?

IS IT POSSIBLE TO BE FRANK WITH A JEALOUS PERSON?

OR REMAIN LOYAL TO A JEALOUS PERSON?

IS IT FOOLISH TO TELL SUCH PEOPLE THE TRUTH?

Does the victim of jealousy inevitably set up a barrier of reserve, and, in time, actual deceit, in self-protection?

IS HE, OR SHE, JUSTIFIED IN DOING THIS?

Is it both fair and wise to fib to jealous people "for the sake of peace"?

Or is open warfare more decent and intelligent?

HOW WOULD YOU HANDLE A JEALOUS PERSON?

HOW WOULD YOU WISH YOUR OWN JEALOUSY TO BE HANDLED?

SHOULD CHRONIC JEALOUSY, WITHOUT EXTREME PROVOCATION, BE GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE?

The Human Side of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

THE Chinese are getting excited because of their suspicion that the Dalai Lama of Thibet has rigged up a scheme with his British-Indian friends to grab a large chunk of Western China. Nowhere in the world is there a personality more colorful and picturesque than this spiritual and secular ruler who is venerated by millions of Buddhists. They believe him to be the reincarnation of the spirit of the Lord Buddah. As such, he's half god, half king.

The western world had first news of him 25 years ago when Col. Younghusband led a British column through the mountain passes and burst into closed Thibet. The Dalai Lama fled into China and wandered about for four years with a caravan of 400 followers, 200 horses and 500 camels. He was persuaded to return to his sacred city, Lhassa, but the Chinese sent an army into Thibet and this time the Dalai Lama sought refuge among the British in India.

Lama Adopts British Customs

THOSE smart colonial experts, who seldom overlook a trick in dealing with exigent native potentates, gave him such a good time that he went back to Lhassa convinced that John Bull was a fine fellow and a square shooter. He took up a few British ways and customs, even to waxing his needle-point mustache. And now word comes that he's an ally with the British in extending their influence eastward into disintegrating China.

The table of the Dalai Lama is served with golden plates and golden cups. His bed is made up in white satin. The 52-year-old pontiff of the Buddhists has a choice, when he takes the air, between the age-old palanquin, carried on the shoulders of husky hillmen, or of lolling back in a $20,000 car presented to him by Britain. He is said to possess a treasure of jewels and gold, built up through the long centuries and valued at half a billion dollars.

He has a passion for flowers and a fondness for animals; not only a fondness, but a peculiar power over them. Remembering what the Buddhists claim—that he is the reincarnation of Buddha—it is at least interesting to know that his favored pet, a savage Bengal tiger, is a pussy cat under his stroking hand. The great striped terror that would claw the heart out of an ordinary man cowers at the feet of this slant-eyed, pock-marked Mongolian, begging for caresses.

Depredations of a Pirate Queen

CHINESE pirates, with a headquarters in the wickedest city in the world, the Portuguese Macao on the China coast, and led by a pirate queen, are robbing and sinking trading ships bound for Hongkong or Shanghai. British and Japanese gunboats scurry to the scene of the piracies and find nothing except a scuttled ship or a few dying seamen with their throats cut.

The queen of the pirates, lady admiral of a fleet of 14 swift junks, is Lai Choi San, well-known to the harassed authorities, who haven't been able to lay a hand on her silken skirts. With spies everywhere in the trading centers, Lai Choi San gets werd by radio of the sailing of a vessel loaded with silk or other rich merchandise. She lies in wait with her junks, swoops down on the victims and is away and in hiding before the gunboats can get on her trail.

Unless all tales of the pirate queen are inventions, she is not only a very efficient sea robber with all the modern improvements, but a beautiful woman as well. She is slender and short, with jet black hair and eyes and a smooth, ivory skin. Her jewelry is exclusively old jade—pins, earrings and bracelets. Her face and dark eyes are the face and eyes of an intelligent woman, but hard and ruthless. She is about 40 and is always exquisitely dressed, even while commanding her pirate junks—white satin robe with green jade buttons, and white silk slippers with green jade ornaments.

The Story of a White Prisoner

AS many tales are told of her in the Far East as were ever told of Robin Hood or Captain Kidd. She is said to have inherited her ships and her business from her father, an old-time pirate who was killed in a sea fight with a rival pirate chief. His daughter, who is said to have been educated in this country as a very young girl, continued and expanded his piracy business. Wherever she goes, on land or sea, a giant man-servant is always at her shoulder.

A prisoner, later released by Madame Lai Choi San, saw her in action. Her fleet of pirate junks sighted three small trading ships. From her post of command, in a throne-like chair on the after deck, Madame Lai gave with jeweled hand the calm order to go into action. The small cannon of the pirate junks began to bark as Madame waved her white prisoner below decks. Things were about to take place that she had no wish for him to see.

Half an hour later, when he was permitted to go on deck again, the trading ships had disappeared from the surface of the sea—all except one that was slowly sinking by the head. And Madame Lai, the pirate queen, turned from watching her returning small boats loaded with loot from the sunken ships, to ask her prisoner what were the latest plays in the London Theater.

JUST REAL PEOPLE

By Winifred Black

Mild oats—no, it's not a misprint—the "M' is an "M" all right, and of all the refreshing, amusing, touching, little books on the bookshelf, this one is the best of all.

No cold-blooded villains, no fiends in human form, no gangsters, no racketeers, no kidnaping, no "you get the papers and I'll steal the girl" rubbish.

There they are, exactly as they are in real life.

The husbands and wives have their little tiffs and their little misunderstandings, and their foolish little ambitions and funny little spites, but you feel as if you'd known them all your life and wanted to know them as long as you lived.

Jane is the name of the heroine, but she isn't a heroine at all, she's just a nice, foolish, conceited, vain, self-conscious, kind-hearted, courageous, regular girl.

When she's helping herself to a third portion of chocolate cake she isn't Jane at all. She's Lady Jacqueline Somebody or other, sitting at the ancient table in the old dining room in the family castle and she's eating something strange and wonderful made by one of the old family retainers special for Lady Jacqueline's capricious appetite.

She's in love with the mathematics teacher, madly, passionately, desperately in love, with him.

The mathematics professor is just a precise little man with a mean gift of sarcasm, and when he turns this gift loose at Jane's expense she falls out of love with him with a thud—after she has carefully considered throwing herself from the school house porch and being carried to the cemetery with a sheaf of white lilies in her delicate hands.

She falls in and out of love like a puppy falling in and out of water, and there's nothing twisted and hideous about her love affairs.

Whew, what a relief!

I'd like to put a crown of laurel on the heads of the two people who have given us some sure enough realism, at last.

Whenever I get discouraged about the "younger generation," I'm going to pick up that book and read a chapter—and come to my senses again.

Don't miss it.
